New Efforts To Cut Power Costs Pledged By President

Tells World Conference 'Vicious Circle' Will Be Smashed.

Says High Rates Limit Mass Use

Hints Other Projects; Starts Boulder Dam Generator.

Text of President's Address—Page 26.

By Sidney Olson.

President Roosevelt yesterday solemnly promised the Nation that his Administration would break the "vicious circle" that he said is keeping electricity rates too expensive for its wider use by the masses.

At an afternoon session of the Third World Power Conference, he pledged the construction of additional power projects, if necessary, to make power cheap and therefore more generally used.

Quoting an observation made by Charles P. Steinmetz, famous inventor and electrical engineer, that "electricity is expensive because it is not widely used, and it is not widely used because it is expensive," he said:

"That observation still holds true. There is a vicious circle which must be broken, and wise public policy will help to break it.

Has Constructed Reservoirs.

"The Government of the United States has promoted the construction of several great reservoirs, primarily for navigation or reclamation, but with incidental values for flood control and the regulation of stream flow. Among other incidental values is the generation of electric power.

"This may prove to be the force that breaks the vicious circle. * * * If these are not sufficient, the influence of additional meritorious projects awaiting development can be added."

At the conclusion of his 2,000-word address, made before the scientists and engineers of 52 countries assembled in the blue-and-white reaches of Constitution Hall for the occasion, the President formally signalled the first generation of power at Boulder Dam by touching a button connected directly with a 3,500-horsepower generator there.

He said:

"Boulder Dam: in the name of the people of the United States, to whom you are a symbol of greater things in the future; in the honored presence of guests from many nations, I call you to life!"

Roar at Dam Heard.

From a loudspeaker connected with a radio description of the scene at the dam came the answering roar of the 12 great jets of water being released as the first turbines started to turn in the huge project—the 12 man-made waterfalls tumbling from a height 10 feet greater than that of Niagara Falls. The President lingered momentarily to hear the roar of the water his button-push had released.

E. W. Smithers, communications officer of the White House, tapped out a wire message to the dam men, asking:

"Did you get it?"

The flash came back at once:

"Yes. There's water all over the place!"

The President, given a great ovation as he entered while a band played the "Star-Spangled Banner," was also heavily applauded during his address when he asked the audience:

"Are you and I paying enough attention to 'human engineering'?"

He had outlined the progress of the United States from its "dra-

AAA Achieves Pre-War Parity; Now Seeks Farm-City Equality

Original Goal's Attainment Goes Unheralded as New Conservation Program Aims to Lift Agriculture's Income to Urban Level.

By Robert C. Albright.

The original purpose for which the AAA was set up and the clarion cry of the early New Deal farm program—parity prices for farmers—has been virtually attained, but the AAA is not seeking to advertise the event. As of August 15, the ratio of prices received by farmers for their products, to the prices they must pay for commodities they purchase, moved to 98 per cent. Despite early striving toward this objective, there has been no formal announcement of its achievement. Bare quotation of the ratio is carried in a price study issued by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Inquiries at the AAA developed that a broader and more general objective has been substituted for the original price parity aim, and the new soil conservation program and farm payments now are being shaped to this end. The new objective is parity of "farm income" with the income of urban dwellers. Parity prices, officials point out, are now only a part of the larger objective.

Pointing to this shift, a recent AAA report on three years of operation stated:

"Parity prices for agricultural products was the primary aim of the emergency programs for 1933 to 1935. However, the real goal of agricultural recovery was the restoration of farm income to a point at which it would represent a fairer share of the national income and an improvement in living standards for the farm population to make them more nearly commensurate with those of the non-farm population."

From the low point of 54 per cent in February, 1933, prices rose to 98 per cent of parity last month largely as a result of the combined effect of the 1934 and 1936 droughts, rather than because of any price impetus given by AAA adjustment programs, most officials admit.

In the last year of 1934, following that year's drought, the parity price ratio rose from 70 per cent to

Promises Fighting Drive for Good Government in Indiana Talks.

The text of Gov. Landon's address tonight, closing the Republicans' Maine election campaign, will appear in The Washington Post tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

Aboard Landon Train En Route to Maine Sept. 11.—A "fighting campaign for good government participated in by Republicans and Democrats and independents everywhere" was promised Indiana voters by Gov. Alf M. Landon today from the rear platform of his Maine-bound special train.

"We want a Government that will be just and honest, that will protect the average man in his economic rights and his opportunities, and also a Government that will not take too much out of his pocketbook," the Kansan reiterated to trainside crowds that cheered his appearance.

"Make no mistake about it," the Presidential nominee said, "we all pay taxes whether we know it or not."

"Fighting Campaign."

At five Indiana stops—Gary, Valparaiso, Plymouth, Warsaw and Fort Wayne—Landon repeated, in somewhat different words, his pledge of a "fighting campaign."

Between stops, as his train rushed toward Portland, Me., for a speech Saturday night, just two days before the State election, Landon conferred with party leaders and walked through his train to greet visiting Hoosiers.

Just before his train sped out of Indiana into Ohio, the candidate told a Fort Wayne audience: "I don't blame this present Administration for trying to hide behind a non-political campaign plea. I would too if I had to defend such a record as they have made in Washington in the last three years.

"It is easy enough to go out and promise this and that to cure all our economic ills in one fell swoop. But big talk is always easy.

"To you and me this is serious business, so I have weighed very carefully every word and every pledge that I have made in this campaign. I shall continue to do so. Party platforms to me are not to be thrown away in the waste paper basket after election."

The Governor drew laughs and applause when he told throngs jammed about his platform that "I know you have come down to look me over. Well, that goes both ways. I am glad to see you, too."

G. O. P. Congress.

"I know that it is not convenient for all of you to come to Topeka to see me on my front porch," he continued, "so I thought I would come and visit with you from my back porch here. This is going to be a front porch, a back porch, and a fighting campaign."

"If we are going to get that kind of government I have been talking about," Landon said at Valparaiso, "we must elect a Republican Congress in November."

At Warsaw, Ind., Republican editors on their annual outing heard the Governor say, "We want relief

G. O. P. Charges Kin of U.S. Aids Jam Pay Rolls

Cabinet Members, Senators Accused of Sponsoring Jobs for Relatives.

By Felix Bruner.

The New Deal, the Republican National Committee charged yesterday, is becoming a family affair. The committee listed the names of prominent office holders whose sisters, cousins, aunts, sons, daughters, wives or brothers are on the Government's pay roll.

Heading the list is Secretary Roper, whose daughter works for the Tariff Commission. Next is Secretary Wallace, with a sister in the General Accounting Office, and Secretary Morgenthau, with a nephew on the pay roll of the AAA.

Going from Cabinet members to Senators, the committee pointed out that Carroll Miller, brother-in-law of Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, is a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission with the same salary as the Senator—$10,000 a year. A sister of Senator Byrne (Democrat), North Carolina, works in the Agriculture Department, the committee reported.

Next on the list is Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, with four relatives on the payroll, a nephew in the FHA, a sister, who is clerk for the Committee on Indian Affairs, and a son and daughter, on the payroll, but jobs not specified.

Wife Is Secretary.

Vice President Garner's niece works in the Census Bureau and a cousin works at AAA, the committee said. Besides, Mrs. Garner is drawing a salary as secretary to the Vice President.

Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, who was keynoter at the Democratic National Convention, has a son and a nephew on the payroll, the son as clerk of the Senate Committee on Library, and the nephew as an attorney for the RFC.

Senator Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, is the only official listed as having an aunt at work for the taxpayers. The committee failed to say where she works. In addition, the committee said, the Government employes a son, two daughters and a brother-in-law of the Senator.

Brothers Have Jobs.

"Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, is the father of Joseph T. Robinson, jr., who is an assistant for the Committee on Conference Majority of the Senate. Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia, has a son drawing money from the public treasury; Senator Pat Harrison, Mississippi, a daughter; Senator David I. Walsh, Massachusetts, a nephew, and Senator John H. Bankhead, Alabama, a son.

"Senator Kenneth D. McKeller, Tennessee, has a brother who is postmaster at Memphis, Tenn. Another brother, D. W. McKeller, is the Senator's secretary, as well as clerk of the Senate Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads, of which the Senator is chairman."

Gonig from Senators to other officials, the committee said that the wife and two nephews of William L. Austin, director of the census,

Progressives To Campaign For Roosevelt

Secret Chicago Session Pledges Support to His Candidacy.

Decides to Raise Fund, Send Out Speakers; Adopts Planks.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 11.—A national conference of "Progressives," including many self-termed Liberals in both politics and labor, today united in active support of President Roosevelt for re-election.

After a four-hour secret session in a downtown hotel, the group adopted a resolution indorsing Roosevelt's candidacy, promised to campaign actively in his behalf and agreed to raise a campaign fund.

A declaration of principles also was adopted, with 11 points and a declaration that the members reserved fully their right to political freedom of action otherwise than tendering support to the President in this contest.

The session, which adopted temporarily the name "National Progressive Conference," adjourned after notifying President Roosevelt of its action. Representative Maury Maverick, Texas Democrat, headed a committee charged with drafting a telegram to him, which read:

"The progressive conference composed of liberals of all parties meeting in Chicago today has indorsed you for re-election. We are now proceeding to organize in every State in the Union for the purpose of waging a vigorous campaign for your re-election and the furtherance of the fight for equality of opportunity."

Not Indorsing Any Party.

The resolution of indorsement stated a belief that "division of liberals" at the present time would "only result in direct support for reaction," but declared the Progressives were not "necessarily indorsing any political party."

Unbiased examination of the field of candidates, the resolution said, "makes it unmistakably clear that the next President of the United States will be Roosevelt or Landon," and "in this campaign there is, therefore, only one choice for American Progressives."

The resolution ended with a plea to all "Progressive-minded citizens in every walk of life" to vote for Roosevelt.

The conference organized by voting to set up an executive committee of 15 with Senator Robert M. La Follette, of Wisconsin, as permanent chairman.

La Follette presided at today's session and was one of eight who signed the conference call.

The Senator was authorized to name the other members of the committee, which will direct its campaign efforts and send out speakers. Organizations also will be perfected in every State, each with an executive committee of men and women.

Norris Heads Committee.

Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, who had urged the conference by telegram to take a "firm stand" in favor of President Roosevelt, was named honorary president of the executive committee, and Senator Edward F. Costigan, Colorado Democrat, honorary vice president. Grace Abbott, of Chicago, national woman's leader, was named honorary vice chairman, and Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the New York Power Authority, acting treasurer.

Contributions to the Roosevelt campaign were solicited at the close of the meeting and Senator La Follette said several thousand dollars were raised. Labor organizations, which were represented at the meeting, were reported the largest contributors.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and leader of the Committee for Industrial Organization, headed the labor delegation, which also included Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of New York.

Principles Are Adopted.

The Progressives adopted the following set of principles:

1. The right of every American to worship God according to the dictates of his conscience, to express his opinion through a free press and free assemblage, and to have an effective voice in his political and economic life.

2. The right of every American on the farm and in the city to earn a comfortable living by useful work and to receive for his work an income which the full productive capacity of society can afford.

3. The right of American youth to develop their talents through public education, adequately supported, and to find a place in the life and work of their country.

4. The right of men and women whose industry has helped to build the Nation to face their declining years free from fear of want.

5. The right of labor to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing and free from interference by employers.

6. The right of every American to live under a Government strong enough to suppress the lawless, wise enough to see beyond the selfish desires of the moment, and just enough to consider the welfare of the people as a whole.

Battle Rages Near Madrid; Toll Is Heavy

Rebels Are Driven Back After Gaining Ground in Crucial Fight.

San Sebastian Defenders Add Fresh Soldiers; Stores Pillaged.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

With Loyalists on the Talavera Front in Spain, Saturday, Sept. 12.—Rebel forces launched a terrific attack at dawn yesterday and several hours later the battle was still raging. The loyalist lines held at the beginning of the battle, one of the major engagements of the civil war.

All branches of the military were thrown into the desperate struggle, including aviation, artillery, infantry and cavalry. The force of the rebel charges finally drove the loyalists back, but the government militiamen recovered and began a counter attack, regaining most of the lost ground.

Casualties were heavy on both sides, as the opposing armies surged back and forth over the disputed plain.

Seek Reinforcements.

Government commanders ordered up reinforcements, expected later today, to aid in stopping the insurgents' drive toward Madrid. If sufficient reinforcements arrive, the loyalists plan a well-prepared attack.

The battle, which might conceivably decide the fate of Madrid and the civil war, was being fought over a battlefield 65 to 68 miles from the capital.

Fighting began when rebel planes flew over government positions at 6 a. m. yesterday and bombarded the loyalists. Government planes took to the air and dog fights were in progress all along the front. Each bomber was accompanied by fast fighting planes. One unidentified plane fell in flames.

Artillery fire, aerial bombardment and rifle and machine gun volleys were constant most of the day.

The loyalists general headquarters announced government forces were holding all positions "but realizing that the intensity of the combat might force a retreat somewhere, reinforcements were called to hold the line."

At nightfall yesterday, the fighting slackened and Red Cross stretcher bearers and ambulances began gathering up the dead and wounded. No official casualty figures were given.

Before leaving the front for Madrid late last night, Gen Jose Asensio stated:

"Today was one of the bitterest fought battles of the war. It demonstrated the strength of Loyalist resistance in the face of a desperate enemy charge."

U. S. Coast Patrol Increased to Stop Drug Smuggling

Striking at illicit narcotic traffic seeping in from the Orient, the Treasury Department yesterday ordered the Coast Guard to increase its ship strength in the Pacific.

Patrol boats and cutters assigned to the Atlantic Seaboard will be dispatched to the Pacific, where the main force will be concentrated, it was announced.

Reassignment of the craft was the second major move this month by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., in the drive against the drug traffic. Only 10 days ago he shifted some 500 members of the Customs Border Liquor Patrol to the Customs Agency Service.

Included in the changes in Coast Guard assignments were three of a group of seven new 327-foot, 20-knot cutters now being constructed in the Navy Yard.

Assignments include the Samuel D. Ingham, which will be commissioned today, to Port Townsend, Wash., instead of to Boston; the Roger B. Taney, being completed in the Philadelphia Navy Yard, to Honolulu, instead of Boston, and the Alexander Hamilton, expected to be ready next spring, will be based at San Francisco instead of Honolulu.

Edith Maxwell Retrial Ordered by Va. Court; Guilt Ruled Unproven

Granted a New Trial

MISS EDITH MAXWELL.

Appeals Court Ruling Brings Joy to Edith in Lonely Jail Cell

Pale From Months in Prison, Girl Pins Hope Now on Convincing Jury of Her Innocence; 'I Feel So Grand,' She Says at News.

As the morning sun streamed through the window of Edith Maxwell's jail cell yesterday, new hope came to the slim 22-year-old school teacher, pale from many months' imprisonment. Edith was looking out of the jail window at Jonesville, Va., when W. B. Merriman, justice of the peace there, hurried over with the glad tidings that she is to have a new trial.

It was Merriman who brought the news to her, who told her the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals had set aside the verdict of the trial court sentencing her to 25 years in prison for the murder of her father, Trigg Maxwell.

"I certainly am happy, I certainly am happy," Edith repeated over and over to Merriman.

The great news brought joy to all at the jail at Jonesville. The jailer, Pat Giles; the sheriff, R. F. Giles, permitted Edith to come to the telephone when The Post's long distance call came through to the little mountain town.

She came to the phone, and the first thing she said was:

"Tell all the people who have

Justice Eggleston Reads Ruling of Tribunal at Staunton.

Post Fund Helps Win Legal Victory

Her Freedom on Bond Will Be Requested Within a Week.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Staunton, Va., Sept. 11.—Edith Maxwell, whose sentence to 25 years in prison for the murder of her father when he attacked her in a drunken rage aroused the sympathy of the entire Nation, today was granted a new trial by a 5-to-2 decision of the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals setting aside her conviction by the circuit court of Wise County.

This beautiful Shenandoah Valley town, birthplace of President Woodrow Wilson, heard Justice John W. Eggleston read his majority opinion that evidence against the 22-year-old slim, pretty school teacher was insufficient to sustain the verdict of first degree murder. Four justices concurred with Justice Eggleston.

It was a victory for Edith, who now will first seek her release from the jail at Jonesville, Va., on bond, and then complete vindication at her new trial. It was also a victory for The Washington Post and hundreds of its subscribers, who sent money, more than $1,000 in all, to the Edith Maxwell Defense Fund.

Calls Evidence Insufficient.

In the opinion written by Justice Eggleston he said:

"We think the evidence as disclosed in the record is insufficient to sustain a verdict of murder in the first degree. On it the jury had the right to find the accused guilty of murder in the second degree, but nothing more.

"It follows that the trial court erred in not setting aside the verdict and granting the accused a new trial."

Just after Edith's conviction in November of last year The Post started a fund for her defense, believing that she was innocent of murdering her father, and that the jury in the little mountain town of Wise had judged her guilty not because she had meant to kill her father, but because she had the temerity to strike back at her "pappy."

$40 Sent From Los Angeles.

More than $1,000 came into this fund from all over the county. Only two weeks ago, The Post received a contribution of $40.64 from the Los Angeles Elementary Teachers Club, which wanted to do its part toward securing justice for the pale, pretty young woman, who received the news in her jail cell today and repeated again and again:

"I certainly am happy, I certainly am happy."

Since the fund was first begun, The Post has been working quietly in every way possible to secure Edith's exoneration and freedom. Charles Henry Smith, noted attorney of Alexandria, Va., at the request of The Post, gave his services for Edith's defense. The money from the defense fund was used toward securing copies of the trial record at Wise, and paying traveling expenses incident to the appeal, now successful.

Woman's Party Aided.

The appeal was filed by Attorneys Smith and M. J. Fulton, of Richmond, Va., who joined Edith's defense staff at request of the Vir-

Hitler Assails Jews and Reds In Peace Talk

By the Associated Press.

Nurnberg, Germany, Sept. 11.—Reichsfuehrer Hitler, with 400 war planes nearby, tonight delivered a 20-minute oration for peace.

"We pray Providence to spare our children what we suffered in the past," he said, "but let no one imagine our movement can be halted or shaken. We stand inflexible like a rock."

Der Fuehrer's only reference to Bolshevism and Jewry, assailed for two days by his highest subalterns, was:

"We only want peace to proceed with reconstructive work—but with our own methods and not the methods of Jewish bolshevists."

He walked through a gigantic portal to enter the colossal open air cathedral that is the Zeppelin meadow outside Nurnberg.

As he mounted a brilliantly lighted rostrum, Hitler looked down on the uniform caps of 150,000 brown-uniformed Nazis.

The entire meadow was an enormous edifice of light encircled by limestone grandstands.

The beams of 2,000 army searchlights suddenly flared. The shafts of light converged some 3,000 feet above the brown-shirted men.

District Chiefs Favor Increase In Auto Taxes

By James D. Secrest.

District officials yesterday plainly indicated they favor higher taxes for motorists and use of the gasoline tax fund to support all municipal agencies having to do with traffic or highway maintenance as the 1938 budget hearing ended its second day.

Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, auditor and chairman of the special tax committee, came out flatly for a motor-vehicle weight tax, in place of the present personal property tax on autos, and estimated it would raise $1,500,000 or $1,000,000 more than the present levy.

Melvin C. Hazen, president of the Board of Commissioners, asserted Washington motorists pay the lowest tax in the Nation, or an average of about $14 on gas and cars as against $34 for the country as a whole. Commissioner George E. Allen intimated that he would favor utilizing part of the gas-tax fund for building schools or other municipal expenses.

This attitude was immediately challenged by Charles E. Collins, counsel for the American Automobile Association, who insisted motorists should pay only for municipal facilities they use and if more

Board Seeking Sabotage Clew After Blaze Aboard Cruiser

A board of inquiry at the Brooklyn Navy Yard last night hunted evidence of sabotage in a small fire aboard the U. S. S. Indianapolis last August 25, which one official has described as "undoubtedly deliberate." Efforts to destroy the heavy cruiser by the introduction of nails and phonograph needles into the vessel's high-voltage wiring system, discovered by the Navy Department, led to the investigation, which was being conducted quietly.

When fire broke out on the warship it was traced to a short-circuited section of the power cables. The Indianapolis has been in the New York Navy Yard for overhauling.

The famous cruiser, which served President Roosevelt as a "floating White House" for several days in 1933, meanwhile went to sea yesterday to test the repairs made in Brooklyn since June 10. She is scheduled to sail Tuesday to rejoin the American fleet on the West Coast.

In stating that the fire was caused by a short circuit in the cable through which two nails were found driven, Capt. C. A. Dunn, manager of the yard, last night asserted:

"No damage was done to the ship. The damage was confined to the cables.

"Two nails were found in one circuit in a fireroom. One nail

12-Yr.-Old White Cottage, O., Heroine Waits Timidly to Receive Medal From President

By Frederic B. Tuttle.

Bewildered at the dance and glitter of the great city's lights that winked beneath her hotel window, 12-year-old Kathryn Van Horn, winner of the first civilian medal ever awarded by the Army and Navy Legion of Valor, stood at the threshold of glory last night, and was amazed.

She stood in the pathway worn by the heroines of her textbooks back in White Cottage, Ohio, Joan, the Maid of Orleans; Molly Pitcher, of Revolutionary fame, and Florence Nightingale. The ghosts of these women who braved death to aid men who suffered fluttered in and out of her bedroom in the Mayflower Hotel, where, somehow, as though by magic, she had been whisked. They confused her.

"It is like a birthday party" she said slowly.

"I am more afraid of this than I was of that."

When the sandy-haired girl who today will receive her gold medal from President Roosevelt, said "that," she meant throwing her body in front of a sled bearing two boy playmates careening wildly into the path of a speeding train back in White Cottage last February.

Today, Kathryn, of White Cottage, will become Kathryn of the White House—if only for a brief moment.

Escorted by officials of the Legion of Valor—men who have been decorated for gallantry in the face of enemy fire—she will stand tremulously before President Roosevelt while he pins the gold medal on her breast.

Then it will be over. And Kathryn will be glad.

"I think it is all lovely, and I am so anxious to see the President and then go home and study hard," said Kathryn shyly last night.

It was, she agreed with a childish nod, quite an occasion, for it

Workers Lack Enough Food, A. F. L. Reports

Wage Increase Is Urged in 'Undernourishment' Condition in U. S.

By the Associated Press.

Reporting "widespread" undernourishment" among wage earners, despite increased industrial profits, the American Federation of Labor said yesterday, "industry can well afford to raise workers' incomes."

In its monthly survey of business the federation cited Government statistics to support its charge of "widespread undernourishment" among employed workers. It also quoted from the findings of the international labor office at Geneva that "workers generally are better nourished in Sweden than the United States."

"This widespread undernourishment among employed wage earners lays a heavy responsibility at the door of the Supreme Court, which terminated NRA, the agency through which workers could have kept their incomes rising proportionately with business gains," the federation said.

"Upswing Gains."

Reporting that business activity had been "well sustained" during the summer, and that "the upswing has now gained enough momentum to offset such uncertainties as election prospects, warfare in Europe and crop shortages," the federation asked:

"What hope do these good business prospects hold for those who have never had enough to eat? The answer is, on the whole, very little."

The federation based its opinions on the food situation on studies made by the Labor and Agriculture Departments.

A study of employed workers' incomes in North Atlantic cities, the federation said, showed that only 26 per cent met the (income) requirements for an adequate diet, while 30 per cent did not have enough food to meet minimum requirements.

Incomes Inadequate.

Asking "what income will assure a satisfactory food budget for a family of four?" the survey said:

"The figures for Detroit indicate that families with less than $1,900 a year, for father, mother and two half-grown children, do not spend enough for food to buy the adequate diet at moderate cost."

International studies, the federation said, had shown that the average low-paid worker in this country was no better fed than the average low-paid worker in other countries.

The federation maintained that an adequate diet for all would mean a vast increase in farming.

President Plans Drive to Reduce Electric Rates

matic aspect" of "territorial expansion" down to the present, "facing now the problems of matured national life."

He pointed out that the rate of population increase has declined of late, with "a point of stationary population" predicted within the next 25 years. The addition of improved lands "has come to a stop," he said, adding, "in fact, in many parts we have overdone it and must restore some of them to more natural conditions."

As an added evidence of national maturity, he cited figures to show that while once 85 per cent of the country's population lived on farms, today nearly 75 per cent lived in cities and villages, with the proportion of old people increasing more rapidly than the proportion of young people.

After touching on the necessity of "aiming for more abundant and more widely distributed national income," the President predicted that the day will come soon when "one-half of the population can provide the basic machine-made products necessary for the welfare of the whole of the population," and added:

"We can conceive that this would mean that the people between 20 and 50 years of age will be able to produce the basic commodities for themselves, and also for all others below and above those ages."

Asks Effects Be Considered.

For those reasons, he said, "it is the duty of you who would be so greatly responsible for it to think what would be the effect on our leisure, our culture and our way of life. I would suggest that the answer should not be left solely in the hands of bankers, government officials or demagogues."

The dramatic pauses of the President's voice between the three classes he named brought a general laugh in the nearly filled auditorium.

After studying the flexibility of power he passed on to condemn the centralization of electric energy in the "same great factories" where the steam engine had caused the concentration of workers and of people into large cities. He said:

"Sheer inertia has caused us to neglect formulating a public policy that would promote opportunity for people to take advantage of the flexibility of electric energy; that would send it out wherever and whenever wanted."

He then said that "what is economically sound is to be determined by social accounting more than by present methods," in referring to the availability of electric energy as a means of promoting decentralization of industry.

Other Speakers Heard.

Speakers preceding the President on the program included Joas dos Reis, Brazilian minister of communications and public works, who told the conference that "the American Government is fully justified in the attitude which it has taken in controlling the power industry . . . The present trend of legislation is toward nationalization of sources of energy."

Dr. Arthur Surveyer, Montreal consulting engineer, who spoke in French, said that "the world is now fatally drawn towards an economy which will be more and more controlled."

Lewis Mumford, critic and author, pleaded for "a clear conception of humane goals" to forestall a collapse of modern civilization, saying:

"Never before were the engines of destruction more effectively marshaled. Never before have barbarism and insecurity and terrorism threatened so large an area of civilization."

Sun's Courageous Refusal to Back Roosevelt Indicates Democratic Hostility.

By Franklyn Waltman

IN the midst of all the subterfuge, propaganda, weasel words, exaggerations, cowardice and demagoguery which mark American political campaigns, there usually flashes across the scene of such contests one or more demonstrations of real courage and high purpose that win widespread admiration and revive faith in the democratic system.

WALTMAN.

Such a demonstration in this year's campaign was the Baltimore Sun's declaration that it could not advocate the re-election of President Roosevelt. Its reasons for arriving at that conclusion are relatively unimportant. The important thing is that a great newspaper has the courage to follow its convictions and break with its traditional moorings, irrespective of its personal interests.

And it required courage for the Sun to do what it has done. In the first place, the Sun for 99 years has been a Democratic newspaper, fighting for that party's ideals and candidates every year, except three times—twice when William Jennings Bryan was the Democratic nominee for President on a platform of free silver, and once in 1895, when the Democratic Party in the State had become boss ridden.

Baltimore normally is a Democratic city; Maryland normally a Democratic State. Most of the readers of the Sun are Democrats and many of them are as wedded to that party as any Southerner. But in the instant case there were two special factors which might have deterred the Sun from pursuing to the end the logical course of the convictions it has expressed for years.

One is the fact that between President Roosevelt and what in Baltimore is known as "the Sun family" there existed a personal relationship. When Mr. Roosevelt ran for the Vice Presidency in 1920 he was warmly supported by the late Van Lear Black, then a principal owner of the Sun. When Mr. Roosevelt was defeated in that year, Mr. Black appointed him a vice president of a surety and bonding company which the Baltimorean controlled and of which Senator George L. Radcliffe—now the Roosevelt campaign manager in Maryland—was senior vice president until his election to the Senate two years ago.

The friendship between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Black continued until the latter's death. Mr. Roosevelt went to his Campobello summer home aboard the Black yacht a few days before he was stricken with paralysis. Mr. Black had visited with the then Gov. Roosevelt the day before he was drowned. The Sun remains in control of the Black family. In breaking with Mr. Roosevelt, The Sun also has parted political company with many of its closest friends, men of prominence in Baltimore, who, at least nominally, are supporting President Roosevelt.

The second factor which confronted the Sun was that its own poll of Maryland voters, on the basis of fragmentary returns, indicated that President Roosevelt was the choice of approximately 54 per cent of the voters outside of Baltimore and of a much larger proportion of those within the city. Thus it dared take a stand which might be rejected by a majority of Marylanders.

Nevertheless it acted in accordance with its convictions just as it did in 1896. Starting work as a cub reporter on the Sun in the early twenties I met people in Baltimore who still denounced that newspaper for turning against the Democratic Party in 1895 and 1896 and who claimed they never read the newspaper for that reason. Undoubtedly the Sun again will experience a similar reaction now—but it will survive as the Manchester Guardian survived the wrath of the English people and became great because it had the courage to denounce the Boer War.

The easiest course for the Sun to have traveled in this campaign would have been to remain Democratic nominally, supporting President Roosevelt for re-election and criticizing those New Deal policies with which it disagreed. That is the course many Democrats, who, rightly or wrongly, have no more taste for the New Deal than the Sun has, are following this year for reasons of political expediency. The fact that the Sun, like a newspaper of character, has the courage of its convictions is one reason why newspapermen regard themselves as superior to politicians.

And the Sun's declaration is evidence of how strongly many life-long Democrats feel about the dangers of the New Deal. John W. Owens, editor of the Sun and unmistakably the author of its declaration, is no minion of Wall Street or of munitions makers. He was nurtured on Democratic principles and has spent his life fighting against special privilege and in behalf of progressive principles.

How extensive his sentiments are held among old-line Democrats of this country remains unknown but the lists of those who have spoken out is sufficiently long to indicate that their number is legion. They are a factor in this campaign which cannot be discounted or laughed off.

This campaign may go down in history as the campaign of straw votes and contests. The Republican National Committee has caused speculation by offering a prize for the best letter on "Why I Am for Roosevelt." The Washington Post is offering prizes for the best guesses on how the Presidential election will come out.

This column has no desire to be left behind in this movement. Consequently it is going to start a contest of its own. A prize of a big red apple will be given for the most logical explanation—written in as many words as you need—of this thesis:

"Why was it patriotic, noble and in the interest of the general welfare for John J. Raskob and members of the Du Pont family to contribute to the Democratic cause in 1932 and 1933, but ignoble, heinous, unpatriotic and a menace to our liberties (as Jim Farley indicates it is) for these gentlemen to contribute to the Republican cause in 1936?"

This is a serious effort to ascertain the fine shades of distinction which should be applied to the various contributions of these men. Democratic Chairman Farley and Democratic Publicity Director Michelson, in particular, are invited to compete.

without waste, we want a government that is not wasteful."

A number of supporters boarded Landon's train at Chicago for the eastward drive which included 10 New England rear platform talks as Portland is neared tomorrow. Among those aboard were Gifford Pinchot, former Governor of Pennsylvania; Henry L. Mencken, author and newspaper writer; James T. Williams, of the Hearst newspapers, and Verne Marshall, editor of the Cedar Rapids (Iowa) Gazette.

Landon's Chicago visit lasted three and three-quarter hours. Met at an outlying station by George F. Harding, Illinois National Committeeman; William Hard, Republican radio speaker; Raymond Benjamin, assistant to National Chairman John Hamilton, and other party officials, the candidate was driven directly to Harding's home behind a special police escort. He waved a good-by to a crowd of greeters.

As he entered Harding's residence, the Governor paused to shake hands with well-wishers along an iron fence.

were employed by the Government. South Trimble, solicitor in the Commerce Department, is a son of South Trimble, clerk of the House.

While the Republicans were becoming alarmed over nepotism, the Democrats were filing with Trimble as clerk of the House an account of their receipts and expenditures. It showed that receipts, expenditures and the amount left in the party war chest were all considerably below corresponding figures of the Republican committee.

$1,908,840 Spent.

The Democrats, according to the report, spent $1,008,840 in June, July and August, compared with $1,783,000 spent by the Republicans during the same period. The committee still has $372,000 in its fund. James A. Farley, National Chairman, repeatedly has made the statement that the party will spend no more than $2,000,000 this year. Republicans have retorted that it has available in addition billions of dollars in Government funds, being spent for relief and other purposes, with which to influence the election. Previous Democratic disbursements during the year amounted to $511,818.

Contributions to the Democratic party during June, July and August amounted to $1,081,768, compared with $2,050,311 collected by the Republicans.

The Union Party, under the standard of which Representative William Lemke, of North Dakota, is seeking the Presidency, reported that it had collected $20,944 and spent $23,853. It was the first party report to indicate a deficit.

The American Liberty League reported that it had collected this year up to August 31, a total of $384,847 and had spent $404,297. The duPont family of Delaware loaned the league $64,875, of which $39,873 came from Irenee duPont.

J. M. Patterson, of New York, was the largest contributor to the Democratic fund, with $20,000. Robert W. Bingham, Louisville newspaper publisher and Ambassador to England, donated $10,000.

Gate Receipts.

Gate receipts at the Democratic convention in Philadelphia totaled $30,900. This money came from the sale of boxes. Sale of the Democratic year book, at $2 a copy, netted $132,788, and sale of advertising brought in $54,925.

Another report covered receipts and expenditures of the Good Neighbor League, a New Deal organization headed by Stanley High. It took in $32,058 and spent $30,400. Among the large contributors to this cause was Donald R. Richberg, who donated $1,500.

Among well-known Democratic contributors was Josephus Daniels, Ambassador to Mexico, $600; Lawrence Westbrook, Deputy WPA administrator, $500; Robert Fechner, head of the CCC, $360; Breckinridge Long, former Ambassador to Italy, $1,000; Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the Mint, $1,000; Gov. Joseph Boyd Poindexter of Hawaii, $500, and Meredith Nicholson, Minister to Venezuela, $250.

Contributions of $5,000 were listed from James D. Mooney, New York; Frank J. Wright, Memphis; Joseph M. Schenck, New York; F. J. Lewis, Walter J. Cummings and William J. Froelich, all of Chicago.

Other large loans listed to the Liberty League included $10,000 from Stanley N. Brown, of Pittsburgh; $3,125 from T. L. Chadbourne, New York sugar man; $1,250 from W. L. Clayton, Houston, Tex., cotton man; $15,000 from George M. Moffett, of New York; $7,000 from O. Frank Woodward, of Rochester, and $5,000 each from J. Howard Pew, Philadelphia; John J. Raskob, New York; John L. Pratt, New York; Alfred P. Sloan, jr., New York; E. T. Weir, Pittsburgh, and Joseph E. Widener, Philadelphia.

The Political Arena

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 11.—Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, the former Mrs. Pauline M. Sabin, who supported President Roosevelt in the 1932 campaign, today announced she would vote for Gov. Alf M. Landon and work for his election in November.

Mrs. Davis was formerly chairman of the Women's Organization for Prohibition Reform. Her husband, donor of the Davis Cup in international tennis, was a former Governor General of the Philippines and was Secretary of War in the Coolidge Cabinet.

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 11 (AP).—Charles West, Undersecretary of the Interior, today asserted former President Hoover "approved a moratorium on European war debts and thereby cancelled in one stroke more money" than the present Administration "spent for relief of human suffering."

West, Presidential "contact" with Congress, addressed the Ohio State Democratic platform convention.

He declared the "net increase" of the public debt during the Roosevelt Administration was no larger than that of the Hoover regime.

West's address was the climax of the afternoon session after the convention speedily adopted a platform carrying sweeping indorsements for President Roosevelt and Gov. Martin L. Davey.

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Henry P. Fletcher, former chairman of the National Republican Committee, returned from a European vacation today ready to offer his services in the present campaign.

In a jovial mood, Fletcher expressed a belief that President Roosevelt "might be able to carry England."

"But as the English are not voting in this election," he said, "I am not discouraged."

Of conditions abroad, he said he found evidences of "great prosperity without help from any New Deal."

He paid tribute to the work being done by his successor, John D. M. Hamilton, saying he was doing a splendid job."

Keene, N. H., Sept. 11 (AP).—State Representative William J. Callahan, dean of New Hampshire legislators and Townsend candidate for the Republican nomination for United States Senator, announced today he had been offered "a price" to "sell out the Townsendites and withdraw from the contest." He declined to say who made the offer.

Callahan is opposing Gov. H. Styles Bridges and former United States Senator George H. Moses.

Boston, Sept. 11 (AP).—James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, today plunged into the task of visiting virtually every city and town in Massachusetts, determined, he said, to elect "the Democratic ticket from top to bottom."

Roosevelt, an insurance man, is a registered voter in Brookline, Boston suburb.

Omaha, Nebr., Sept. 11 (AP).—Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, Republican campaign speaker, today criticized President Roosevelt's use of a quotation from the Twenty-third Psalm in his Charlotte, N. C., address.

In quoting from the Bible, the President "moved up to another and final altitude in striving for an adequate simile to defend his own estimate of his own achievements," the Michigan Senator said in an interview.

He added, "If this campaign is going to turn into a search of the holy writs for text or challenge, then I prefer the admonition 'Look ye to the rock whence ye are hewn.'

"That rock is the Constitution and an utterly independent Supreme Court. When the Constitution speaks it is the voice of the people. So I say 'Look ye to the rock,'" Vandenberg concluded.

Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State under President Wilson, said tonight Secretary Ickes and Rexford G. Tugwell, resettlement administrator, are carrying on Federal projects "in open violation of the law of the land."

Speaking on a regular Republican National Committee radio program, Colby said that notwithstanding the "illegality" of some projects "as decided by the courts of Kentucky, and the District of Columbia, Ickes and Tugwell have persisted in their attempt to accomplish what the law says they have no right even to undertake."

In conclusion, Colby said:

"For my part I am grateful that the Republican Party offers a truly American instrumentality with which to compass the rescue of the country from its present danger and I am deeply grateful that it has offered the Nation, as a Presidential candidate, a man of sanity and courage, who is loyal to American principles."

Va. Supreme Court Outlines Merits of Case in Granting Edith Maxwell New Trial

Decision Cites The Testimony Of Her Mother

Statement Lists Precedent Rulings in Other Murder Trials.

The complete text of the decision of the Virginia State Court of Appeals granting Edith Maxwell a new trial for the murder follows: The decision, written by Justice John W. Eggleston and concurred in by four other justices of the court, was read by him at Staunton, Va., yesterday.

Edith Maxwell vs. Commonwealth of Virginia.

From the Circuit Court of Wise County.

Petitioner, Edith Maxwell, and Ann Maxwell were jointly indicted in the Circuit Court of Wise County for the murder of Trigg Maxwell, the father of Edith and the husband of Ann Maxwell. Edith Maxwell was separately tried, convicted of murder in the first degree, and sentenced to confinement in the State penitentiary for 20 years.

The principal assignment of error is that evidence is not sufficient to support the verdict.

Taken in the light of the verdict, the record discloses these facts:

Petitioner is a young woman 21 years of age, still living with her parents in Wise County, where she was born and reared. Largely through her own efforts she had finished high school and obtained two years' of college education, fitting herself as a teacher. She had taught for one year in the public schools of her native county and was preparing to continue such work.

Trigg Maxwell, petitioner's father, was some 50-odd years old and a coal miner by occupation. When sober he was kind and good to his family. But unfortunately he was addicted to drinking, and, when under the influence of liquor, was quarrelsome, abusive to his wife and children, and inclined to otherwise treat them unreasonably. Whether he was drunk at the time of his death is the subject of much conflict in the evidence. The accused and her witnesses claim that he was, while the Commonwealth's witnesses contend that he was not. The jury's verdict, of course, settled this conflict adversely to the accused. But even so, the Commonwealth's evidence shows that he had been drinking shortly preceding the occurrences leading to his death.

Began Quarreling.

On Saturday afternoon, July 20, 1935, Trigg Maxwell left home and did not return until about 10:30 p. m. Only his wife, Ann Maxwell, and his 12-year-old daughter, Mary Katherine, were then there and both had retired. He turned on the light and immediately began quarreling with his wife as to where she had been picking berries that day and where she intended going the next.

Something was said by him about giving her "30 minutes to leave the house" the next morning. Thinking that he was drunk, the wife remonstrated with him and urged him to go to bed, but he declined to do so and went out of the house. Mrs. Maxwell and Mary Katherine then went to sleep. About 12:30 a. m. the husband returned home. Upon finding that Edith had not then returned home he became irritated, remarking that "a man ought to take a club and break her neck." His wife again remonstrated with him, accused him of being drunk and again tried to induce him to retire, which he refused to do.

According to the next door neighbors, who testified for the Commonwealth, shortly before 1 o'clock that night a car drove up, some one got out and went into the Maxwell home. Almost immediately an altercation began and continued for about ten minutes. Loud voices of the father, mother and Edith were heard. The parties appeared to be "scuffling." In a short while the voice of Trigg Maxwell was heard repeatedly crying in distress. "Oh Lordy, oh Lordy." Edith, partly clad, was seen to run out of the house and heard to call to her younger sister, Mary Katherine, to bring her shoes and clothes.

Chant Kelly, the head of the family living next door and still awake, went over to the Maxwell home to render aid. He was met by the accused, who refused his proffered assistance. Kelly then returned to his own house. Immediately the radio began playing in the Maxwell house with sufficient volume to drown out any other noises therein. This continued for about ten minutes, then there was quiet.

Called for Help.

After a period of 30 minutes, Mary Katherine ran to the Kelly residence calling for help, saying that her father was dying. Upon the arrival of the neighbors and a physician, Trigg Maxwell was found lying in the doorway leading from the kitchen to the porch, with his head about 30 inches from a meat block. He was clad only in his underclothes, was unconscious and died within 15 minutes.

In explanation of his condition the accused, her mother and younger sister, Mary Katherine, at first said that the deceased had been drunk and fallen and struck his head against the meat block, sustaining the injuries of which he died. Not until after the arrest, a day or so later, of the accused and her mother, upon the charge of having murdered the deceased, was anything said by either of them or by Mary Katherine, as to their having been any altercation between Edith and her father.

An autopsy performed on the body of the deceased disclosed three wounds upon the head. The first was a fairly clean cut three-fourths of an inch long commencing an inch above the hair margin and extending down through the entire scalp to the bone. The skull was not fractured. One of the other wounds was on the left side of the head, and the other was on the right. They were not cuts, but more in the nature of severe bruises. There was likewise a slight bruise above the nose and both eyes were somewhat swollen and bruised. The deceased had also sustained a bruise on the left forearm and a slight cut on the right little finger. According to the physicians, death was caused by a brain hemorrhage attributable to the wound just above the forehead and first described.

While there is some conflict in the details, the testimony of Edith, her mother and sister is subtantially in accord. They say that Edith returned home about 1 o'clock in the morning and prepared to retire. She looked under the couch on which she slept to get her bed covers, but found that they were not there. She then started into her father's room for the necessary covering and was warned by her younger sister not to go in there, as her father was drunk, had been quarreling with her mother and had threatened to run the latter away from home the next day. To this Edith replied:

"That doesn't make any difference. It's not the first time he has been drunk. He is not going to run Mama off."

Talked to Sister.

Edith then procured her bed covers from her father's room and returned to her sister's room and began talking to the latter. Her father was then moving around in his room and muttering to himself. He said something about whipping Edith for having stayed out so late. Despite her remonstances that she had been out with his nephew and her first cousin, he proceeded to attack her. They were then in the kitchen. He first picked up a chair, but at her command dropped it. He then grabbed a butcher knife, which she attempted to take away from him. The knife dropped from his hand and the younger sister secured it and hid it behind the clock. In the meantime he had seized Edith by the hair. In the ensuing scuffle they overturned a bucket of water and knocked several kitchen utensils from the wall.

Having broken loose, Edith went into her mother's room, but was followed by her father, who renewed the altercation. He seized her by the neck or near the throat and pushed her over a chair and she fell to the floor. She felt something at her back, reached for it and found that it was a shoe. This she grabbed and struck several times in his direction in the effort to free herself from his grip. As soon as her father released her she dropped the shoe, ran out of the front door between her home and that of Chant Kelly, her next door neighbor. Her clothes had been almost torn from her body. She went to the side entrance of the house and requested that her sister bring her shoes and clothes. Just about this time Mr. Kelly appeared on the scene and offered his assistance. But this she declined, as she did not wish her neighbors to know of the family difficulties and did not suspect that her father had been seriously hurt. Shortly after Mr. Kelly's visit the mother and young sister succeeded in quieting the father and getting him to bed. Mrs. Maxwell found that her husband was bleeding from his wounds and washed the blood from his face. Mary Katherine mopped up the water from the overturned bucket and scrubbed from the floor the blood spots.

Before retiring, the father's bloody shirt was removed and by Mrs. Maxwell put in the stove (in which there was then no fire), along with some powdered carbide which her husband has overturned.

Household Quiet.

About 30 minutes after the altercation had ended, the household had quieted down and the parties had retired. Mr. Maxwell arose from his bed and went out on the porch to get a drink of water. He was heard to fall. His wife went immediately to his assistance and found him lying unconscious in the doorway leading from the kitchen to the porch, with his head near the meat block as above described.

It will be observed that except in the one particular as to whether the deceased was drunk at the time of the altercation, this story of the witnesses for the accused is not materially at variance with that of the Commonwealth's witness.

But the Commonwealth lays great stress on certain additional circumstances as showing that the testimony of Mrs. Maxwell and her two daughters was unworthy of belief, and as demonstrating that the accused was guilty of first-degree murder.

A search of the premises on the day following the killing revealed a bloodstained pillow slip and other bloody bed clothing buried under some soiled clothes in a clothes basket or barrel on the porch. It is argued that a concealment of these bloody red clothes shows a guilty conscience on the part of some one. Mrs. Maxwell testified that she put the articles in this, the usual receptacle for the soiled clothes. This is not controverted. There is no evidence that the accused even knew of the disposition of these articles. In view of the fact that Mrs. Maxwell has likewise been indicted for the murder of her husband, it is probable she would have assumed responsibility for the concealment (granting it to be such) of this bed clothing, if, in fact, Edith had thus attempted to dispose of it?

The same is true of the bloody shirt which Mrs. Maxwell admitted she had put in the stove and later burned. It is next said that the evidence shows that the accused had a feeling of hatred toward her father, as the result of which she wilfully, premeditatedly and with malice aforethought killed him. There is testimony that the father had frequently reprimanded her for what he considered to be her improper conduct in staying out late at night with men.

Threatened by Father.

At times he even threatened to whip her for such acts. All of this she resented, and not entirely without cause since the evidence does not disclose that she was guilty of any more reprehensible conduct than keeping late hours with young men. When these occasions arose the accused undoubtedly, as the evidence shows, assumed a defiant attitude toward her father and even gave vent to her feelings in what may be termed wild and unguarded remarks. But the chances are that such were soon forgotten by both the accused and her father.

Furthermore, the evidence clearly shows that some of the so-called "threats" on which the Commonwealth lays the greatest emphasis, were made in jest when she was being taunted by her young companions as to what punishment her father would probably inflict upon her for driving late at night with a young man, or like conduct.

And not without significance is the fact that nearly all of the "threats" were made a year or more previous to the killing. The general rule is thus laid down in 13 R. C. L., Sec. 216, P. 912: "In almost any situation—whether the fact of the killing is denied or whether self-defense is pleaded, or whether it is contended that by reason of provocation the killing is reduced to manslaughter—proof of the previous relations of the prisoner and the deceased, whether friendly or hostile or whatnot, is relevant and competent. Quarrels, altercations and hostile acts, ordinarily are provable to show animus, but such proof must not relate to a time too remote from that of the fatal encounter." See also Evans vs. Commonwealth, 161 Va. 992, 1007, and cases there cited. While the fact that some of the remarks attributed to the accused were made more than a year previous to the killing does not render them inadmissible, as claimed by the accused, it may weaken, in the minds of the jury, the probative value of the words spoken. Wigmore on evidence 2d Ed., Vol. 1, Sec. 105, P. 340; Redd vs. State, 68 Ala. 492, 496; State vs. Merrick, 172 N. C. 870, 90 S. E. 257.

Attack Heated.

The Commonwealth next argues that it is highly improbable that the wounds were inflicted with the heel of a shoe, as testified to by the accused. Indeed, there is an insinuation in the cross-examination of the accused, her mother and sister, and in the brief of the attorney general, that the blows were struck with some other instrument—a hatchet or hammer, perhaps—which was thrown into the river running within a few feet of the rear of the Maxwell residence. There was some intimation that a smoothing iron had been used to strike the deceased.

Except for the nature and extent of the fatal wound itself there is no ground for these suggestions. No other weapon of any kind was in any way connected with the killing. No hammer or hatchet was found. The smoothing iron was in evidence at the trial and bore no marks of suspicion. Furthermore, the physicians who testified for the Commonwealth, admitted that it was possible to have inflicted the wounds with the heel of the shoe as claimed by the accused.

The record shows that the deceased came to his death by blows inflicted by the accused. The killing was done either in the manner detailed by the accused and her witnesses, or in some other way which is unexplained.

In Hannah vs. Commonwealth, 153 Va. 863, 149 S. E. 419, Mr. Justice Holt said: "In Virginia, murder is by statute divided into two classes. Every unlawful homicide is presumed in law to be murder in the second degree; that is to say, it is presumed to have been done with malice. To elevate the offense to murder in the first degree, the Commonwealth must in addition show that it was done deliberately, but whether it be first or second degree murder, malice either expressed or implied must appear. There can be no murder without it." See also Puckett vs. Commonwealth, 157 Va. 800, 160 S. E. 19. In Mercer vs. Commonwealth, 150 Va. 588, 594, Chief Justice Campbell said: "In Litton's case, 101 Va. 833, 44 S. E. 923, however, it is said that when the Commonwealth has proved the commission of a homicide and has pointed out the accused as the criminal agent, then it may rest its case, and unless the accused shows circumstances of justification, excuse, or alleviation, a verdict of murder in the second degree will be warranted." See also Adams vs. Commonwealth, 163 Va. 1053, 1061.

If there is a reasonable doubt as to whether the accused is guilty of murder in the first or second degree, that doubt must be resolved in her favor. Dingus vs. Commonwealth, 153 Va. 846, 853. True, it is the jury had declined to accept the story of the accused and her witnesses that the killing was in self-defense. This they had the right to do. While their story was not controverted by any direct testimony, yet there was evidence of circumstances affecting the credibility of the witnesses themselves and casting a doubt on the probability of their account of the killing. All of these made the defense of justifiable homicide, as detailed by the accused and her witnesses, a question for the jury under the principles laid down by Chief Justice Campbell in Puckett vs. Commonwealth, 157 Va. 800, 808-9.

But this does not mean that the jury had the right under the evidence to find the accused guilty of a "wilful, deliberate and premeditated killing"—that is, murder in the first degree. We think the evidence as disclosed in the record before us is insufficient to sustain a verdict of murder in the first degree. On it the jury had the right to find the accused guilty of murder in the second degree, but nothing more.

It follows tha tthe trial court erred in not setting aside the verdict and granting the accused a new trial. We find no merit in any of the other assignments of error. The claim that the short form of indictment, drawn according to code, Section 4865, and under which the accused was tried, does not give sufficient notice of the cause and nature of the accusation, guaranteed by Section 8 of the Virginia Constitution, is, we think, sufficiently answered by what Mr. Justice Hudgins said in Hurd vs. Commonwealth, 159 Va. 880, 884-5, and in Bausell vs. Commonwealth, 165 Va. 693, 695, 181 S. E. 453, 459. What there was said need not be repeated here.

Aftr the writ of error was granted in this case the petitioner applied for bail for her appearance before the trial court upon the final determination of her cause. To the judgment refusing such bail a writ of error was awarded.

The petition and record in that matter presented this question: Did the trial court err in refusing to admit the accused to bail after she had been convicted of murder in the first degree, and pending the determination of her case on appeal? But since the judgment of conviction must be reversed and the cause remanded for a new trial the situation has changed and that question has now become moot. Should the accused hereafter renew application to the judge of the trial court the latter will be confronted with a situation quite different from that found in the present record. As to what action he should then take, we, of course, express no opinion.

The writ of error granted in the matter of the application for bail will be dismissed. The judgment of conviction of murder in the first degree will be set aside and the petitioner awarded a trial de novo.

Reversed and remanded.

Lotteries Urged For Relief Funds

Baltimore, Sept. 11 (AP).—Fourteen of the 23 members of the city grand jury signed a special report today recommending lotteries and legalized book making as sources of revenue for relief purposes.

The report said:

"If it is legal to bet at the (horse race) tracks and thereby give the State a piece of the money, why not legalize 'bookmaking,' as is done in other civilized countries and get our revenues, and provide at the time, penalties so severe that violators will hesitate to cheat and defraud the State of its monies."

As to lotteries:

"In one of the gambling 'rackets' the take has been estimated by the State's attorney office at $50,000 a day—over $15,000,000 a year."

"Relief," said the report, "is with us to stay—at least, for years to come. * * * Money will have to be found * * * and here are two suorces from which it may be obtained."

Capitol Burglary Charge Is Denied

Held on a charge of breaking into the Capitol, Louise Barbozon, 27-year-old transient, yesterday pleaded not guilty before Police Court Judge Hitt.

Daniel McDevitt, Capitol policeman, testified he found Barbozon kneeling on the floor on front of the office of Kenneth Romney, sergeant at arms, and that the defendant had one arm through the grillwork in the door.

Several papers, policemen swore, were found on Barbozon which belonged to the House press gallery superintendent.

Barbozon was defended by Joseph Sitnick. The attorney contended the defendant had merely gone to the men's room with the permission of the guard on duty.

Edith Maxwell Granted Retrial By 5-to-2 Ruling

Evidence Held Insufficient for First-Degree Verdict in Father's Death.

ginia branch of the National Woman's Party, one of the many women's organizations who rallied to aid her fight for justice.

In Edith's future The Post's defense fund and Attorney Smith also will figure. Next week Smith will go to Wise, Va., and to the court of Judge H. A. W. Skeen, who presided at the first trial. Judge Skeen, who refused to grant a new trial, will be asked to release Edith on bond, as she is no longer under conviction of first degree murder.

Her admission to bond, if the application is granted, will mean that for the first time since she was arrested and indicted for the murder, she will be free to go to her home, to live outside a jail cell, to have a life beside the weary monotony of watching the sun rise and set on Virginia's mountains from narrow jail windows.

Family Waits Her Return.

She will be able to go back to Pound, to her mother's home; to her mother, Mrs. Anne Maxwell, also under indictment for the slaying of her husband, Trigg Maxwell; to her little sister, and to her brother, Earl Maxwell, who has worked in her behalf, who co-operated with The Post in a series of articles, who sought out new facts to aid in her appeal petition.

Attorney Smith, happy that the appeals court had granted the error petition, said today the case will be sent back to the Circuit Court of Wise County and will be placed on the docket for trial, probably within the next two months. Then he and Attorney Fulton will seek a change of venue, on the ground that Edith would not get a fair trial in her home county.

If the change of venue is granted, Edith's new trial will be in some other Virginia county; if not, it will be in the courtroom at Wise, with the jury including her townspeople, parents of children she taught in a little one-room school on a mountainside.

Two justices of the Court of Appeals dissented from the majority opinion. They were Justice Henry W. Holt and Chief Justice Henry Campbell. Justice Holt read the dissenting opinion which said in part:

"This is no backwoods inquisition. At the trial an able, impartial and experienced judge presided. The accused was represented by counsel, eminently competent, who interposed in her behalf every defense which with propriety could have been offered."

Edith Maxwell's story was that of a girl who incurred the enmity of her father because he could not understand why a girl, although 21 years old and supporting herself through her teaching job, should want a life outside of that within her home. Edith wanted some measure of independence of thought and deed.

The father, Trigg Maxwell, often was angry with her if she stayed out late at night; they had had words about this several times.

One night that of July 21 last year, Edith went from her father's home at Pound to Wise, 12 miles away. It was Saturday night. She went with her cousin, who made the trip to visit a girl he knew.

Was Offered Lift.

The cousin was not ready to come home when Edith wanted to go. She saw a friend from Pound, Raymond Mead, who offered her a lift in his car. She got in and rode back with him. Also in the car were a young married couple with their baby, Mead's brother and a girl acquaintance of his.

Said Edith:

"We stopped and let out the married couple and their baby and the other couple out at their homes. We went on to the Ritz Cafe, where we met a friend who sat with us while I drank a glass of ginger ale and ate some potato chips."

Shortly after midnight Edith arrived home, Mead and the other man driving on.

"When I came in," Edith testified at her trial in November, "my sister, Mary Catherine, says to me, 'your bed covers is in pappy's room, but don't go in there. He's drunk and he's going to run ma out of the house tomorrow.'

"I had to have my covers so I went into his room and he says to me 'I'm going to whip you' and I says 'Pappy, don't you do it.' I backed out into another room and he comes after me.

Recalled Butcher Knife.

"There was a butcher knife a lying on the table and he grabbed it and I yelled, 'Pappy don't you cut me.' He grabbed me by the hair of the head and kept pulling me on toward the kitchen. It hurt.

"We knocked over pans while we was racketing out there. I got away, but he comes after me and says, 'I'll show you I can whip you.' He grabbed ahold of my flesh near my shoulder and pushed me down against the wall. I was scared.

"I felt something against my back and I reached around for it. It was a shoe. It used to be my shoe, but I gave it to mamma. I had to do something so I grabbed the shoe and hit him. I don't know how many times I hit him when I was coming up from the floor."

"I broke away and I knew I had to hide because Pappy was a-yelling now that he was going to kill me. Pappy had ripped off most of my clothes, so I grabbed up something and ran out into the street.

"Pappy was a-yelling 'Why can't a man whip his own child.' I made up my mind right then to leave home and I went back and told Pappy and Mama.

"Pappy said 'mind down now, Edith, you've got a good home here. I says, 'Yes, Pappy, but you fuss me even when I go to the neighbors' houses. You can whip me when you're sober and I'll take it; when you're drunk you try to kill me.'"

Trigg Maxwell died about an hour after the scuffle with Edith. She was arrested, indicted and tried, with the State contending that the slaying was deliberate and the outgrowth of longstanding enmity between Edith and her father.

Edith's mother and her sister, Mary Catherine, both gave testimony corroborating that of Edith. But the jury convicted her of first degree murder and she was sentenced to spend 25 years of her life in prison.

Edith was first quartered at the Wise County Jail following her arrest on the day following her father's death. She was there until her conviction in November. A few months ago she was removed to Jonesville, county seat of Lee County, while the Wise County Jail was being remodeled.

When Edith Maxwell walked back from the courtroom at Wise to the jail, faced with 25 years of prison, she did not give up. In the jail cell she went on with her profession of teaching.

Her pupils were not the varied-aged children of the one-room school, but women bootleggers, thieves and hard-faced women sobering up from drunken sprees, all locked in the same big cell with her.

While she tried to aid these women, teach them without textbooks, just sitting and talking with them in the jail cell, telling them about the literature she knew, about history and geography, her brother, Earl, was rounding up evidence to aid Attorneys Smith and Fulton in their fight for a new trial.

Earl Maxwell, who left home when a youth, is now 32, and is a salesman for a New York candy firm. He secured affidavits from leading medical inspectors, coroner's and physicians who examined the autopsy report on his father. These physicians said the effect of the blows was not sufficient to cause death.

Schoolgirl Here to Receive Hero's Medal

Underwood & Underwood.

Miss Claire Kathryn Van Horn enjoys some of her mail at the Mayflower Hotel as she awaits to see President Roosevelt today and become the first girl to receive the Army and Navy Medal for Valor. Last winter she blocked a sled on which two boys were riding from the path of an express train. All escaped unhurt.

was her birthday, and she was 12 years old, and there was a big cake, looking like a mountain with snow on it, to be cut.

She wished she might share it with her brothers and sisters out in Ohio.

The wives of Legion of Valor officials patted Kathryn on her shoulders and said nice things, and offered her ice cream and ginger ale and comfort.

But Kathryn was both appreciative and afraid.

"The boys were coming down the hill on the sled," said she.

"They were coming fast. I know them so well. And trains are frightfully noisy when they are roaring the way they do.

"I never thought a bit about being a heroine or anything like that. I just dumped them over, that's all, and the train went roaring away like a nightmare into the distance."

Kathryn will be glad to get back to White Cottage. She will always cherish the medal the men who shed their blood for their country gave her.

"But," she mused last night, "I want to be a nurse some day, a nurse like Florence Nightingale."

Board Seeking Sabotage Clew In Cruiser Fire

was found in another circuit, but that wire was dead.

"This action was undoubtedly deliberate. The Navy Yard has no one under suspicion at the present time."

A Navy Intelligence officer last night said he could see no relation between the fire on the Indianapolis and previous hints of sabotage on the cruisers Quincy and Vincennes.

However, a more than ordinary guard was continued about the six cruisers and cutters now in the Brooklyn Navy Yard in various stages of construction. Bluejackets with fixed bayonets paced their officials at the yard throughout the posts and manned the guard stations.

Conferences were continued by day, but last night no one was under arrest, the Third Naval District Intelligence officer announced.

Some 8,200 men were at work on ship construction at the yard, including some 1,700 on WPA pay rolls, according to the Associated Press.

A "high Navy Official" yesterday was quoted by the Los Angeles Times as saying civilian Navy Yard workmen were displaced by Navy personnel, and Capt. Dunn's statement confirmed that Navy men completed the Indianapolis overhauling.

The Quincy had two fires while she lay at a dock in Quincy, Mass., in August, 1935, one of which did $100,000 damage. Cause was reported as "undetermined by a Navy board of inquiry.

The Indianapolis was commissioned November 14, 1932, at a cost of approximately $11,000,000, without armament. She carries a crew of 600 officers and men.

Hopes to Convince Jurors She Is Innocent of Father's Murder.

been rooting for me, who have helped me through The Post's defense fund, who have brought me this chance for my freedom, that I wish to thank them."

"Thank them all," she said. "Tell them how I appreciate their help, their confidence, their letters and all they have done."

She told how she was sitting looking out of the window when the news came.

"It's pretty monotonous, sitting here looking out of the window," she said.

There were no members of her family with her when she received the news.

Her mother, Mrs. Anne Maxwell, who is under indictment for the murder of Trigg Maxwell, was at their tiny home at Pound, Va.

Wanted to Tell Mother.

Edith said she wanted to be the first to tell her mother of the news.

The mother's trial has been postponed awaiting the appeal decision and Edith's new trial.

"I would like to tell my mother first," said Edith. "If I can get her over at home. I hope I will be the first to give her the news."

Later, Edith telephoned her mother that the news was "the greatest I've ever heard," the Associated Press reported.

Mrs. Maxwell said she was "tickled to death" and that "maybe you'll get justice this time."

Earl Maxwell, Edith's brother, who has worked indefatigably in her behalf, is in New York, she told The Post.

"He will read about my new trial in the papers," she said. "He will come here as soon as he can, probably tomorrow."

"How much longer do I have to stay here?" asked the pale, wan girl, accused of killing her drunken father when he quarreled with her about staying out late.

Bond Plea Refused.

She had been told that the appeals court had dismissed her petition that she be granted bond.

The Post assured her that this was a routine matter, and that her attorneys, Charles Henry Smith, of Alexandria, who gave his services through The Post's defense fund, and M. J. Fulton, of Richmond, will file a new petition for her release.

This overjoyed her.

Edith was happy, but quietly so. Within she has the belief that her vindication must come. When the news first came, she said:

"That's what I was expecting."

Then, too, her emotions have been dulled by weeks and months of looking out of the windows of the Wise and Lee county jails. "It's pretty monotonous, you know."

Edith faces the future with confidence.

Next week she hopes to see her two attorneys, hopes to hear their plans for her new trial, hopes their efforts for her release on bond will be successful.

2 Coast Fliers Killed In Fall During Takeoff

Bellaire, Ohio, Sept. 11 (AP).—Two California fliers died today when their plane went into a spin and crashed in taking off from the airport here. They were William G. Fournier, 22, of San Diego, and Pilot Fred A. Herit, 27, of Vallejo.

They left California a week ago, coming here by easy stages for a visit with relatives. Fournier operated an airport in California.

Herit sent his monoplane into a steep climb to avoid a high tension wire. Witnesses said he apparently attempted to climb to fast and the ship went into a spin.

foreigners and civilians to leave immediately—Editor's note.)

The terrific attack shattered a day of calm. While artillery batteries fired from the hills and rebels bombed from planes, the insurgent cruiser Almirante Cervera moved in from the sea and joined in the assault.

Rebels held every strategic height around the "jewel of seven provinces" and were ready to swoop down as soon as their artillery barrage paves the way for an infantry assault.

Within the embattled city, dissension among the defenders increased. Anarchists, intent on destroying San Sebastian, fought with Basque Nationalists anxious to avoid carnage and ruin.

2,000 Reported Slain.

Burgos, Spain, Sept. 11 (AP).—The Fascist high command tonight announced 2,000 Spanish government troops had been killed in their attempt to take the Balearic Island of Mallorca.

The members of the government expedition force still alive, the insurgents reported, fled to Valencia, where they arrived suffering from starvation.

Other insurgent reports:

Oviedo Set Afire.

Madrid, Sept. 11 (AP).—The Spanish government announced that the northern rebel city of Oviedo had been set afire by bombardments. Officials took a firm stand against truce or compromise in the civil war tonight.

French Consulate Closed.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

San Sebastian, Sept. 11.—Municipal Governor Antonio Ortega tonight admitted it would be "difficult" to prevent anarchists from burning the city.

The French Ambassador, Jean Herbette, ordered evacuation of all citizens by 4 p. m. today and closed the French consulate.

Despite efforts of Basque Nationalists, nominally policing the city, to control militant factions among the defenders, bands of anarchists began pillaging houses and stores in the afternoon.

Gov. Ortega admitted that in the face of the advancing insurgents he now was little more than a figurehead.

AAA Achieves Pre-War Parity In Farm Prices

Shifts Objective as Goal Is Reached; Now Seeks Urban Equality.

80 per cent. A year ago it stood at 85 per cent. And in the two months from June 15 to August 15, 1936, concurrent with the present drought, the ratio advanced from 89 per cent to 96 per cent. Since that time, due to some sloughing off in prices, it has probably fallen somewhat.

But bureau statistics covering this period will not be available until the last of this month.

Some Farmers Burned Out.

It has been suggested that one reason why no stress has been laid on the 96 per cent ratio is that parity farm prices, at the cost of two serious droughts, is a Pyrrhic victory for those farmers whose crops have been burned out and who have nothing to sell at parity or any other price.

The new parity price ratio is the highest in seven years. In late 1929, it rose to 99 per cent, but the average for the year as a whole was only 95 per cent. Four years earlier, in 1925, it struck a 99 average for the year, and in 1919 and 1920, just after the war, it soared to 105 per cent. During the war it went even higher.

Farm income parity, the new AAA objective, has not kept pace with prices, officials point out. In July, 1936, for example, farm income was estimated at $711,000,000, excluding Government benefit payments, or 89 per cent of the 1924-1929 average.

The AAA claims more than two-thirds of the depression disparity between income of farmers and that of the rest of the population already has been removed.

It points out that in 1934 there was a disparity of about 50 per cent, the farm income per person having a purchasing power of 56 per cent of the prewar period, while the purchasing power per person not on farms was about 84 per cent of the prewar period.

In 1935 the disparity was only about 10 points, or 12 per cent—purchasing power being 83 per cent of the prewar period for the farm population, and 93 per cent for the population not on farms.

France Adds Guards On Catalonian Border

Perpignan, France (Saturday), Sept. 12 (AP).—The French government today strengthened the force of mobile guards along the Catalonian frontier, instructing border guards to allow fugitives to enter France but to prevent pursures from following.

Guards were instructed particularly to check passage back and forth of uniformed anarchists driving automobiles marked with the initials of Spanish Popular Front parties.

to his audience and opened his address with the words:

"Yesteryear's clouds have rolled by and the Third Reich now occupies a proud and honorable place among nations."

Four hundred war planes nestled in their hangars tonight ready to roar aloft Monday in what air force leaders predict will be an unprecedented display of Germany's air power.

The projected maneuvers were vehement anti-Bolshevist and anti-Jewish operations of leaders.

The roaring warplanes—all the way from tri-motored bombers to fleet pursuit ships—routed Nurnberg from its beds at dawn today.

Thousands lined the streets to watch the maneuvers' preview, while other thousands packed the congress halls to hear Hitler subalterns continue the oratorical war on Bolshevism and Jewry.

District Chiefs Favor Increase In Auto Taxes

revenue is necessary for building highways a higher gas tax should be imposed rather than a motor vehicle weight tax.

Calling the weight tax "inequitable," Collins pointed out that the gas tax requires the motorist to pay only for his use of the highways whether he drives a small or large car.

The A. A. A. attorney also proposed that the Federal Government pay a proportionate share of the expense of street maintenance because of the broad thoroughfares demanded by a National Capital. He urged the director of highways to map a 5 to 10 year highway program and intimated that his association would not oppose a higher gas tax if other revenue proves inadequate. However, he emphasized that he was not committing the organization in advance.

Other major developments at the hearing, which occupied both morning and afternoon, and will be resumed at 10 a. m. today, were:

The District Medical Society opposed the public health centers asked by Health Officer George C. Ruhland and apparently won the Commissioners to their point of view.

Several civic spokesmen, reversing the attitude of witnesses on Thursday, declared a willingness to assume new taxes rather than to sacrifice needed capital improvements.

Mrs. John J. Boyle, jr., chairman of the Consumers' Council, in approving the complete health department budget, declared public health conditions in Washington a "disgrace today," and "a national scandal tomorrow" unless more adequate appropriations are made.

Twelve proposals for improving traffic conditions, based on a study of Milwuakee's system, were submitted by the Keystone Automobile Club.

Physicians Break Openly.

The opposition of the District Medical Society to the health centers proposed by Dr. Ruhland marked the first open break between Washington's organized physicians and the health officer. The society's witnesses intimated they considered the plan a move toward state medicine despite the fact that similar centers are in operation in New York and other cities.

Dr. R. Arthur Hooe, who appeared for the medical society, said the $500,000 asked for the first two centers could be more efficiently used to buy equipment and increase personnel at existing clinics. He cited the society's executive committee resolution stating:

"The Medical Society of the District of Columbia reiterates its plea for adequate appropriations to supply the deficiencies in personnel and laboratory facilities for the control of communicable diseases, but believes that such funds can be most economically expended through the utilization of already established clinics by means of co-operative efforts between the Health Department and the staffs of the community hospital clinics, this co-operation to include the active participation of the Health Department in the maintenance of standards necessary for the purpose of the public health and the establishment of a social service department to assure attendance of patients at these clinics."

Calls City "Plague Spot."

Mrs. Boyle in indorsing the Ruhland budget declared that even the $1,117,492, which is $609,522 greater than the current appropriation, is inadequate, but she said it is acceptable. Declaring Washington is coming to be known as "the national plague" spot, she cited statistics to show the city's high death rate and low per capita expenditure for public health as compared with other cities.

She also indorsed the budgets of the police and fire department and the superintendent of weights, measures and markets.

"If these require more taxes to finance," she said, "I shall gladly assume my share."

Mrs. W. B. Frye, of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, likewise urged adoption in full of the budgets of the health department and the public schools.

A delegation from Michgan Park Citizens Association, headed by John J. Hurley, president, pleaded with the Commissioners to approve an estimate of $190,000 for a new Bunker Hill School. The citizens pointed out that the present school was built in 1911 to accommodate 50 pupils when only a few houses were scattered in that community, whereas now it is crowded with 107 pupils and many others have to attend the Brookland School. There are more than 600 homes in the area.

Urge Playgrounds Completion.

The delegation also asked completion of playgrounds at Turkey Thicket and Bunker Hill, modernization of fire equipment at Twelfth and Monroe streets northeast, and eventually a viaduct over Bates road.

As a possible solution to the school construction problem they suggested Washington follow Chicago's example, eliminate junior high schools and redistribute pupils. They also proposed a $20,000,000 bond issue.

C. E. S. Rich, of the Conduit Road Citizens Association, asked replacement of the branch library and widening of Canal road between Foxhall road and Chain Bridge.

Dr. Llewellyn Jordan, a resident of Maryland, urged that an additional $100,000 be requested of Congress for the new Chain Bridge so that it might be widened beyond the present plan. He suggested an increase in the gasoline tax to the 4-cent levy imposed in Maryland.

Dr. Jordan, a chairman of the bridge committee of the Board of Trade, also told the Commissioners that newspapers had obtained an inaccurate impression of his remarks on Thursday. First, he said, he was not "sour," and, second, he did not criticize the Commissioners for the delay in improving Eastern avenue.

"What I intended to say," he said, "was that the Commissioners were justified in postponing the improvement of Eastern avenue between Laurel avenue and Sligo Mill road so as to connect with New Hampshire avenue until such time as the State Roads Commission of Maryland had opened and improved the extension of New Hampshire avenue within Maryland."

Proposes Centralization.

He suggested that the Commissioners investigate "the delay which has ensued in connection with the extension within the State of Maryland."

Arthur J. Sundlun, of the advisory board of the Keystone Automobile Club, submitted 12 proposals for improvement of traffic conditions although they had no connection with the pending budget.

The proposals are:

(1) All traffic regulation and enforcement agencies in the District be centralized under one director; (2) mounted police for busy intersections; (3) police to supplement signal lights; (4) substitution of yellow for white traffic lines as they are more easily discernible; (5) hook lines or double lines to hold back cars at intersections; (6) investigation to minimize bus odors; (7) creation of a department of safety with a paid secretary and nonsalaried commission; (8) weekly broadcast from traffic court; (9) streamline loading platforms; (10) more traffic lines at busy intersections; (11) more safety islands and traffic divisions; (12) ground lights at curves.

Daniel B. Maher, representing the Georgetown Fire Wood Co., asked that the school request for about $14,000 to operate its own transfer trucks be disallowed. He pointed out that the company he represents does the business under contract now for about $9,000. The Commissioners indicated they are willing to leave the job in the hands of private industry.

During the morning session Commissioner Allen made it a point to ask witnesses whether they are willing to pay additional taxes to obtain needed improvements. While the witnesses prefaced their remarks with the opinion that the Federal contribution should first be increased, they then admitted a willingness to pay more taxes rather than do without capital improvements.

Harry Wender, of the Southwest Citizens Association, suggested the taxing of all slot machines by license requirements. He also demanded a bathing and swimming pool in the Hoover Playground, asserting that children in the Southwest now have to swim in the "dirty old Potomac River."

S. R. Katz, spokesman for WPA Lodge, No. 139, American Federation of Government Employes, attacked Rufus Lusk, secretary of the Washington Taxpayers' Association, for urging elimination of unemployment relief.

"To demand that relief be stopped is cruel and can only be made in total disregard for human life," he said.

H. J. Clay, vice president of the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association, asked construction of two new wings at the Taft Junior High School, a new elementary school at Twenty-second street and Bunker Hill road northeast, and a larger staff for the Woodridge sub-branch library.

H. D. Woodson, of the Northeast Boundary Civic Association, who also spoke for six other organizations in that area, requested additional playgrounds, a swimming pool, a public health clinic, a branch library and several street improvements.

Mrs. W. A. Roberts, representing the Council of Social Agencies, introduced several witnesses who made pleas for adequate appropriations for unemployment relief, social security and public health.

One Strike Ends In Minneapolis

Minneapolis, Sept. 11 (AP).—One of five strikes current here was ended late today when members of the United Pole, Post and Tie Workers Union accepted an agreement providing for wage and hour adjustments.

Simultaneously, all seven members of the Minneapolis employer-employe board organized a year ago to arbitrate labor disputes presented their resignations to Mayor Thomas E. Latimer, who declined to accept them.

The board did not immediately explain its action. Recently, however, its recent attempts to settle disputes had been unavailing. The board had successfully adjusted a number of employer-employe differences during the past year.

Settlement of the pole workers strike paved the way for re-opening Monday of ten plants employing nearly 500 men. The agreement provided pay increases and a 44-hour work week.

Green Pastures And Cold Fog.

President Roosevelt's eulogy of green pastures and still waters was a very pretty speech. Of course, Mr. Roosevelt did not attempt to identify himself with the Shepherd who made David's cup run over. But he did give the impression throughout his speech that in the twentieth century the New Deal is the source of "goodness and mercy" with which the Twenty-third Psalm deals.

Obviously the plain meaning of the President's allegorical reference was that his Administration has brought back prosperity. In this "fourth year of definite upturn" he sees an idyllic picture of returning tranquility. The Federal Government has restored "the purchasing power of the Nation." Farmers have been rescued, working men have obtained large incomes and local governments more revenue. "I trust that you will likewise agree," Mr. Roosevelt concluded, "that better conditions on the farms, in the factories and in the homes of America are leading us to the spiritual figure of the Psalmist—green pastures and still waters."

Close examination of this poetic picture would reveal some extensive bare spots in the "green pasture," one of which would be occupied by a vast army of unemployed. A glimpse of the horizon might divert some attention from the reviving grass to the approaching swarm of mosquitoes—or are they tax collectors? From the still waters could easily be heard the drowning cries of "economic royalists." And creeping through the grass one might detect a horde of termites seeking new subsidies.

While thus rudely placing the microscope over Mr. Roosevelt's green pasture, it would be difficult also to miss the significance of a casual remark at the World Power Conference. Instead of mentioning "upturns" in Great Britain, Sir Harold Hartley, who comes directly from a land that has not had the benefits of a New Deal, casually referred to the "world depression of 1930-33."

But it would be a pity to detract from this idealistic setting in which the President has placed his Administration. As a matter of fact, "green pastures" are even more symbolic of the New Deal than the President seems to think. Both Mr. Roosevelt and his advisers have their vision fixed so intently upon the more abundant life that they frequently ignore the first principles of good government and sound economics. In short, the weakness of this Administration is its failure to adopt practical means of attaining Utopian objectives.

In leading the way to "green pastures" the President forgot the bog of unconstitutionality as well as the quagmire of excessive debt. His mind was on the still water rather than the trail immediately before him. The result has been long and distressing detours. And the cost of the trip has been so tremendous that the "green pastures" now seem to have been carelessly splotched with red ink. No doubt these are mere details to one who is accustomed to thinking in fanciful terms of what ought to be. But to any realist who knows something of the law of compensation these unavoidable details are likely to cast a cold blanket of fog over the President's "green pastures."

San Sebastian.

San Sebastian, the guide books say, has no monuments worth visiting, and little history. Nonetheless, all those who know, and knowing, love, that charming watering spot on the Bay of Biscay, will be distressed to read that the city is being bombarded by the rebels seeking to capture it from the loyalists who have held it for two months. They can only hope that it will be spared the terrible fate visited on its unfortunate neighbor, Irun.

In defense of the city, which has been called the Biarritz of Spain, Basque Nationalists have fought side by side with other elements loyal to the Madrid government. They are prepared to continue that fight to the bitter end. But they have no desire to see San Sebastian (Iruchulo to them) become another mass of smoking ruins. When the rebel victory becomes certain, they plan to evacuate a city that is still whole and are determined to prevent the anarchists from putting the torch to it. It is to be hoped that the rebels will show equal moderation in victory.

It was the patronage of a Bourbon queen, Maria Christina, which half a century ago transformed San Sebastian from a Basque fishing village nestling along the slopes of Mount Urgall into one of Spain's—and Europe's—great resorts. After the royal family established its summer residence there, the court naturally followed, as did the embassies and legations. And if, with the coming of the republic, some of the glitter went out of the social life at Spain's summer capital, its charm continued to attract from that country and many other parts of Europe, people who enjoyed the view of the mountains surrounding the city and the surf sweeping down along that great crescent of beach known as La Concha. The Basques are too proud of the city to want to see it ruined.

Planning In Great Britain.

Among the interesting papers presented to the World Power Conference is a study of "National Planning in Great Britain" by Sir Harold Hartley, chairman of the international executive council. Since economic planning is an active issue in the United States few subjects more timely or pertinent could have been discussed.

Great Britain has rarely adopted abstract principles as a guide to planning. On the contrary, each national problem has been met as it arose, largely by voluntary co-operation between the Government and private agencies. "The continuity of development under governments of different political parties is remarkable," Sir Harold says, "due largely to the ad hoc character of the legislation."

On the side of industrial relations, the policy has aimed mainly at creating machinery whereby voluntary agreements between employers and employes could be reached. No power exists for the compulsion of industrial agreements. But tariff protection for some industries, notably iron and steel, has frequently been made conditional upon reorganization and co-operative action within those industries.

In various instances the Government has encouraged consolidation of industrial units so as to stimulate mass production at lower prices. More than 120 separate railway companies were amalgamated into four main lines. Competition and waste were further reduced by co-operative agreements. With the approval of the Government, steel companies have been merged into larger units and production has been shifted to the most efficient plants. Even in the field of public utilities, as John C. Dalton, manager of the County of London Electric Supply, has pointed out, the government is fostering consolidation through holding companies and otherwise.

Two acts of Parliament permit the regulation of agricultural marketing by boards chosen by the producers. These boards may determine the price at which specific commodities may be sold and the quantity which any producer may sell. Likewise they control grading and the entire marketing machinery. But organizations for the control of any commodity must be initiated by the producers themselves, not by the government, and their scheme must be approved by Parliament and two-thirds of the producers before it can become effective.

Like the AAA, these boards may restrict acreage to avoid overproduction. But unlike the AAA, the British authorities merely supervise the operations of producer groups. The result should be the development of genuine co-operation instead of paternalistic domination.

It is interesting also to note that the British government has taken an active part in scientific and industrial research for the benefit of all productive enterprise. These policies, of course, have been coupled with unemployment insurance, old-age pensions, health insurance, etc., to provide a larger degree of security for the wage earner. To this has been added in recent years an extensive housing and town planning project and practical forest conservation measures.

In many respects Great Britain's task of economic planning has been easier than that of the United States. But one reason for this is the contract betwen British co-operation and the American sport of baiting "economic royalists." Officials on this side of the Atlantic who are more interested in achieving results than in harassing various interests for political purposes should find valuable instruction in Sir Harold's summary:

> Government intervention has always encouraged and facilitated voluntary action and has made much use of voluntary associations. There has been no legislative restriction of combinations or trusts, and as little interference as possible with the course of business. Government ownership has been avoided and even monopolies have been left to private management with the necessary safeguards for the public. The aim has been to secure a certain measure of security and stability, both to individuals and to industry, while retaining the incentive for the exercise of individual skill and initiative within the framework of an organized system.

Budget Fact And Fancy.

If wishes were dollars, the taxpayers who have been attending the hearings of the 1938 budget for Washington might have their requests quickly granted. Then, bridges and stadiums and all other proposed projects could be easily ordered. But, dollars being what they are, these desirable improvements can scarcely be considered, particularly in view of the $18,000,000 difference between anticipated tax revenue and the aggregate funds requested by department heads. By the same token, the citizens who are urging extra expenses for the District, while at the same time shuddering at the mention of higher taxes, are in the main wasting their breath.

It is a truism not without its wisdom that a man must cut his cloth to fit his pocketbook. This holds for cities, too. The District's pocketbook in 1938 is expected to contain $40,000,000. The several municipal departments estimate that they will need a total of $58,000,000 to operate efficiently. Either the pocketbook must swell through the imposition of higher taxes or projected expenditures must be sharply curtailed.

The President's commission, now studying the fiscal relationship between the District and national governments, may recommend an increase in the current Federal contribution. It is also undeniable that Washington has grown tremendously within recent years and that the building activity which is only now catching up with the increase will probably yield a considerably larger tax income in the future. But both combined cannot possibly be expected to close the gap between $40,000,000 and $58,000,000 next year. The alternatives, then, are three. Requests for funds must be severely reduced; new tax sources must be discovered; or present taxes must be boosted.

Under these circumstances, talk of even more elaborate spending is plainly futile. The only reasonable basis on which a citizen who "demands" items not already included in the budget can be heard is when he offers a prefatory explanation of where the money can be obtained. Thus far in the budget hearings such explanations have not been heard. Unless such plans bearing widespread community support are forthcoming, the Commissioners must of necessity devote their chief efforts to elimination of the existing discrepancy between estimated receipts and expenditures.

Germany And Russia.

Were it not for its extremely dangerous implications to the peace of Europe and the world, the grimly humorous aspect of the Nazi campaign of vituperation against the Soviet government and its leaders would be appreciated more than it is likely to be. As it is many will wonder what new devil's brew is being concocted at Berlin behind this latest smoke screen.

At the Nuremberg congress of the Nazi Party, speaker after speaker, taking cues from the Fuehrer, inveighed against Russia in language unparalleled for its bitterness. But it is not a little surprising to hear men identified with a regime responsible for the "cold pogrom" against the Jews, for an unceasing reign of terror against all opponents, and for that St. Bartholomew's night massacre of June 30, 1934, denounce the "Jewish Bolshevist" revolution as "featured by terrorism, murder and bestiality." If ever there was one, this is certainly a case of a pot calling a kettle black.

In Russia the humor of this attack will certainly be lost. The Russians have not forgotten and they cannot forget that in "Mein Kampf," the Nazi bible, Hitler expounded the idea that Germany must expand to the east, i. e., at Russia's expense; that a similar view has been advanced by many another Nazi leader, among them the same Rosenberg whose assault on the Soviet Union at Nuremberg was the most scurrilous of any. That Russia will reply in kind can be taken for granted. Even the breaking off of diplomatic relations between Moscow and Berlin is not an unlikely development of this war of words.

Just why the Nazis should have chosen this particular moment to launch a "crusade" against Russia, communism and the Jews (synonymous terms to the Nazi pundits) is not quite clear.

In his program speech Hitler boasted of the enormous economic progress Germany has made under the Nazis. But he did not reveal its cost. Indeed many suspect that the situation in the Third Reich is by no means as idyllic as the Fuehrer would like the world to believe. In that case it would only be natural for the Nazi leaders to seek to divert the German people from the sad realities within Germany by conjuring up the specter of a Russian threat.

But an additional factor may also have played its part in Hitler's calculations. The Spanish civil war has cut across national lines. In each nation there are those sympathetic to the government at Madrid and those who favor the cause of the rebels. Regarding Russia as its principal obstacle to expansion in the east and one of the bulwarks of the European status quo, the Nazi regime apparently hopes that by placing itself at the head of an anti-Communist front it will secure allies in its impending struggle with Russia.

The strategy is transparent. But the pity of it is that many, blinded by passion, will actually be deceived by it. The struggle against Bolshevism is obviously a fraud designed to disguise purely Teutonic aims. Actually there is precious little to choose between communism and nazism. At more than one point the brown form of tyranny is indistinguishable from the red, which it seeks to destroy.

Landon says citizens of this country are living in a fools' paradise. Well, "the greatest good to the greatest number" is one of the major objectives of a democracy.

Somebody's always trying to take the joy out of life. Now a German physician is experimenting with serums in an effort to find a cure for laziness.

Another thing hard to understand about the financing of the Government is where our grandchildren are getting all that money.

The young man who thought the world owed him a living is the old man who blames the world for his failure.

"Knock, knock." Boom! boom! Verdict: Justifiable homicide.

Father Coughlin's Aims.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was certainly amusing to read in the issue of September 10, Westbrook Pegler's protest (a misunderstanding) of Bishop Gallagher's reference to Father Coughlin as speaking the voice of God.

I am not a Catholic, but it is well for the public to emphatically know, if Mr. Pegler doesn't, that Bishop Gallagher was in no sense deifying Father Coughlin—that he only meant that Coughlin is speaking the voice of Truth in this great national purpose he is striving to accomplish, the same as you or I would reflect and speak this same Truth in regard to something else.

It is a vast pity that Mr. Pegler should so misconstrue and misrepresent the Rev. Mr. Coughlin's work, for people who have investigated know that the National Union for Social Justice is not any longer a one-man proposition, but a unified and organized movement—taking the very great responsibility to endorse the best of candidates in both major parties (a chance people never had before) as well as endorsing a third party candidate for President.

A Father Computes His Son's Taxes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Waltman recently stated that debt commitments of the Treasury are $38,500,000,000. He estimated each person's share at $260, as compared with $130 in 1930 and $168 in March, 1933 (about $92 increase under the New Deal). He concludes that a boy born this year "will still be contributing in his thirty-fifth year to pay off the amazing accumulation of debt so far incurred during the depression." Mr. Waltman warns that "the average man in the street will become dizzy" if he investigates further such "incomprehensible figures."

As an "average man," who is also the dutiful father of a son born during 1935, I determined to find out just how much the boy must pay. Without any serious ill effects (and using statistics as quoted by Mr. Waltman, which are much too high) I found that 35 payments of $4.27 will pay off the boy's share of the gross debt incurred under the New Deal (including 3 per cent compound interest). Using Mr. Waltman's figure of $8,836,000 as the daily debt increase, I find that Government has been running my boy into debt at the ruinous rate of 6 cents per day to fight a condition far more serious to the average man than the World War.

Incidentally, I find that an older son born in 1919 was burdened at birth with a war debt of $255. That debt was only $5 less than at present, and it worried neither the boy, his parents, nor the country as a whole. By 1930 it was reduced to about $130. Thirty-five annual payments of about $12 will liquidate the boy's share of the entire existing gross debt, namely $260 (half war cost and half depression); $962 will liquidate the actual net total debt. If he lived in England his share of the Nation's debt would be about $717 and in France $524.

At this point in my computations I heard Mr. Knox state that our national debt is over $34,000,000,000 ($260 per capita) and that $110 of this amount has been added under the "New Deal." I do wish that Mr. Knox and Mr. Waltman would get together, as I experienced the first dizziness in trying to check and reconcile their statements with census data and official Treasury statements.

I find that they are both wrong in that they did not credit against the outstanding gross debt such items as cash on hand, the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, recoverable loans, etc. A fair credit for such items reduces the actual debt to about $27,000,000,000 ($207 per capita), so that the actual debt increase under the New Deal is about $7,500,000,000, or about $57 per capita. This debt increase was accompanied by a decrease of interest from 3.42 per cent to 2.57 per cent, so that the cost of interest per capita is actually less on the 1936 debt than in 1933. Hence, it appears that the actual cost of expenditures under the New Deal is about $57 per capita instead of $110 quoted by Mr. Knox and $92 by Mr. Waltman.

A $57 debt at 3 per cent interest is liquidated by 35 annual payments of $2.65, so that my boys will pay less than one cent per day to settle their share of the actual debt increase under the New Deal. One and one-fifth cents per day will settle the gross debt increase and 2½ cents per day will pay off the entire existing debt, including the World War cost. Mr. Waltman and Mr. Knox may consider this an "amazing and stupendous burden," but neither the boys nor their father can become greatly excited over a burden which costs about as much as their newspaper.

In a few years I shall explain to the younger son that he is paying $2.65 per year for extremely cheap insurance against violence and for an investment which by 1936 had raised the per capita annual income at least $160; and property values at least $100,000,000,000 ($800 per capita). I shall show him the downward sweep of the business curve from 1929 to 1932 which sickened his father as it progressively obliterated his credit and investments (?), his job, savings and insurance, his home and his future prospects.

I shall tell him how national income fell from 81 billion to 39 billion dollars ($316 per capita) so that the country during 1932 had to spend 9½ billion dollars more than its income in order to exist. And what an existence! Insecurity and worry compounded daily, hungry people, foreclosures, lay-offs, fantastically low and declining wages which seemed to have no bottom, and a price level so ruinously low as to threaten universal bankruptcy.

The boy's Government was forced to invest its cash and credit in spending, which progressively increased employment, income, purchasing, production, and business and banking. Such is the investment Mr. Waltman deplores because it will cost the boy $2.65 per year! If my son disapproves an expenditure which costs him less than one football game he is a piker.

By the time the boy begins to pay his one cent per day the enormous wastage of idle plant and man power (which has exceeded the existing debt tenfold), and the suffering of displaced and unwanted workers may have faded to a dimly remembered nightmare, but it will still be possible to show him useful structures all over the country which will furnish visible evidence that the investment made for him by the New Deal produced lasting as well as immediate benefits. There is no doubt but that he will join his father in the wish that many opportunities may appear in which an investment of $2.65 per year will produce annual income of $160 and upward, along with increased national wealth, and above all, renewed hope for the future in the average man.

Finally, it occurs to me that he will probably inquire why the present generation did not obligate him for 2 cents per day (twice the actual existing amount) and thereby expedite the process of recovery. He will probably also remark that his annual payment will not disappear, whether it be $2.65, $4.27, $12, or his total tax bill. The cash is still in the country and will provide purchasing power for the recipients. It will be spent and respent for goods and services. The boy will rightly conclude that the price is unimportant if (or unless) he has the price, and that he will be able to extract his own income when the stream of commerce (total expenditures) runs full, but that he has no chance when the stream fails, as in 1932. EX-REPUBLICAN.

The Election's Implications.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At the risk of offending some of my friends down South, I wish to put into print the observation that the bulk of Mr. Roosevelt's support next November will be given him by the licked, the lazy and the looney; the bulk of Mr. Landon's by real Americans who value their ancient American right to stand on their own feet, earn their own living, live their own lives, free from Government dictation.

I wish further to say, after observing operations at Republican National Headquarters here six weeks past, that, except as names, both of the old parties have lost their original identities.

Our historic Democratic Party has become the instrument of men bent on Europeanizing our country. The Republican Party has been taken over by young Americans determined to preserve the rights and liberties of a free people.

Many, perhaps most, will think I exaggerate the danger of a Washington dictatorship if Mr. Roosevelt is re-elected. Twenty-four years ago I was travelling over Northern and Central Europe, studying city governments and municipal services for the city of Houston. I found everywhere people enjoying freedom comparable to our own. Had any person, then and there, predicted that within a quarter century all of Europe, except Britain, France and the little nations on and north of the North Sea, would lose their liberty and be ruled by brutal despotisms, that person would have been thought either drunk or crazy.

The Old South, most American of all sections of the Republic, ought to be, and if it realized the truth would be, unanimous for election of the Republican ticket next November. FRANK PUTNAM.

America's Problems.

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: We are proud to proclaim that America is the best country on earth today. Yet, may I mention some of the things which it seems that no politician has any specific proposition to offer as a remedy.

Every 20 seconds a crime of serious proportions is committed in this United States and every 45 minutes a man or woman is murdered. Cost of crime is estimated in the United States at 15 billion dollars annually.

Surgeon General Parran declares that "one adult person out of ten in the United States has had syphilis, half of them innocently. More than half a million persons were disabled by this disease in 1934."

Since the war more people have been killed and injured by automobiles than the casualties suffered by the United States soldiers during the World War.

According to Hugh Johnson's figures, 40 million persons are existing in destitution. This is almost one-third of the population of the United States. Over five millions of these are youths between 16 and 25 years of age.

We are forced to confront the largest national debt in history with more and more preparations for war.

Serious reflection may cause one to wonder what is the United States coming to, is civilization approaching bankruptcy, are we reaping what we have sown? What is the answer?

Park System Founder.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of September 6 A. E. Demeray, of the National Park Service, discusses who established the national park system.

Isn't it an established fact that Secretary Franklin K. Lane in the Wilson Administration established the national park system, and it was progressing very well long before Stephen T. Mather, accepted his job in that department? Therefore Franklin K. Lane should have the credit, not Stephen T. Mather.

"Sound And Fury."

Post Office, Saturday.

"MOST people can repeat any ballyhoo that has heralded a new screen star's appearance—but ask the average man about technical advances in camera work or sound-recording or reproduction: you'll find he's been told nothing."

So says Edward Small, motion picture producer.

And The Post-Impressionist is glad that Mr. Small says it. He gives this columnist more than a merely valid reason to utter a word about certain technical advances in screen technique concerning which a word ought to be uttered.

What would you say if, tonight, you saw—or, if you prefer, heard—"Lights of New York," the first all-talker, produced only ten short years ago?

In those none too distant times, a screen-kiss, dutifully intended to evoke romantic thrills in the audience, frequently sounded as if it had strayed in from a slapstick "comic." The noise of an overturned teacup resembled the roar and rattle of an earthquake. Was grandmother's dimpled darling toddling down stairs—off-screen—and about to enter—on-screen? To judge by those infant footfalls, you'd have thought it was King Kong. Again to quote Mr. Small, "a shot heard 'round the world would be, as like as not, caused by an actress shutting her purse."

Audiences are generous enough—or short memoried enough—to have put aside all thought of these errors of the talkies' youth. But those generous ones are too easily inclined to take for granted the toil and ingenuity of the men who devised the remedies.

Even in the past four years, sound-technique has achieved a pair of developments that are little less than revolutionary. Of these the first was—by way of paradox—silencing the mechanism that reproduced sound. The second was wide-range recording.

Up to 1932, there was always some sound in the supposedly mute moments of a talkie. It was as if, like a baby, the screen, having learned to make a noise, wanted to make noises forever.

The lovers would have said their tender say; the director would have told them to gaze at each other in voiceless longing. But that was not the way the scene reached the theater. In the theater, there was a sound as if boy-friend and girl-friend were crooners.

This, dear sir, was "the static hum." And it took some beating.

Wide-range sound-recording in the studios results in wide-range sound-reproduction in the theaters. It is effected by increasing the range of high and low frequencies—or high and low tones—in the amplifiers. Time was when, as the technician puts it, "those amplifiers were limited within certain frequencies." Now, a technician assures your devoted columnist, "they can equally well pick up the high note of an e-string on a violin or the rumble of a volcano, and record each of them accurately."

To get wide-range reproduction in the theater, three sets of "speakers" are employed: small speakers for high frequencies, medium speakers for medium frequencies, and for deep-toned frequencies large speakers. You can remember that by remembering the three sizes of holes that Jimmie cut in the back-fence to let the cats in and out. The system enabled Small to secure those records of Indian war-whoops, crackle of rifle-fire and the wail of an infant which lend authenticity to his production of "The Last of the Mohicans."

And what will come next?

Well, nowadays the theaters focus their sound-horns so as to throw the greatest volume of sound down the middle aisle, which is all very well for the people near the middle aisle, but often a bit hard on latecomers at the sides. Brace yourself for a convex face for three sets of "speakers," which will break up the outer edges with "honeycombing" and direct the sounds to all hearing-areas simultaneously.

And outdoor recording is also due for a few changes that ought to save time and money—not to mention nerves. "Partial selectivity" is the title of the innovation.

It designates a process whereby one apparatus can record the sounds the director wants recorded and can leave out the sounds he wants to eliminate. Thenceforth, by a real brookside, the real notes of a real lark may be caught, to enhance a bucolic love-scene, without any danger of catching with them the scornful comment of a real bullfrog.

Thanks to sensitivity in recording, the screen, after a half-dozen years of arduous experimentation, is getting closer to nature. The hooting owl doesn't have to be a whistling-machine: he can give, directly and in his proper person, all the hoots he's worth—or all that the director gives him. The trend is away from synchronization and toward simultaneous recording.

Pretty soon, when you go to a motion picture theater—even if you can't believe your eyes—your ears will no longer deceive you.

Granite State Race

New Hampshire Primaries Tuesday Will Probably Decide Outcome Of November Poll; Republicans Seen Holding Edge.

By Earl G. Latham.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Manchester, N. H.

UNLIKE Massachusetts, where the most bitter contest is being fought in the Democratic ranks, New Hampshire's chief battle is taking place in the Republican primaries, which will be held on Tuesday. In New Hampshire, as in its sister States of Maine and Massachusetts, the sharpest tussle is centered in the nomination of a party candidate to the United States Senate.

The New Hampshire Senatorial vacancy was created by the decision of United States Senator Henry W. Keyes to withdraw from a contest for another term. After eighteen years in Washington, the Senator leaves the field to two candidates, ex-Senator George H. Moses and Gov. H. Styles Bridges. The ex-Senator lost his seat in the Roosevelt landslide of 1932 which saw the passing of such others of the Old Guard as Smoot and Watson.

Gov. Bridges was re-elected to the chief executive post in the State in 1934 when few Republican candidacies in the country for that office were successful. He defeated Sullivan, the Democratic nominee, by 89,481 votes to 87,019. The closeness of the vote represents the fine balance upon which political fortunes have hung in the State since 1932. In that year the vote for Hoover was 103,629 votes to 100,680 for Roosevelt.

It seems likely that even in the intra-mural contest between the two Republican candidates for the Senate, the vote will be a close one. The two men were opposed once before, in the election of delegates to the Republican national convention last spring, at which time Gov. Bridges defeated his rival, Moses, by a few more than two thousand votes.

The issues between them in the present contest are really unlike the issues in any other Senatorial campaign in New England, unless it be Connecticut. In selecting their candidate for the United States Senate, New Hampshire Republicans will have to make a choice between the old and the new leadership in the Republican Party. It is a contest between the old dynasty and the newer Republican liberalism which has come to the front in New Hampshire in recent years.

Gov. Bridges represents this new force in the party to the people of New Hampshire in a way which contrasts sharply with the views and attitudes of Moses. Bridges was a delegate to the Cleveland convention which avowedly broke with the former conservative control of the party, but more than this, the Governor is identified with the Winant or progressive wing of the Republican Party in New Hampshire. An ironic twist to the campaign is the fact that Moses helped to elect Bridges in 1934.

Democrats Support One Candidate For Senate.

IN THE Democratic camp, however, there is no contest at all for the Senatorial nomination. Congressman William N. Rogers, of Wakefield, who voluntarily surrendered his chances of re-election to the lower House to hunt for bigger game, is the only candidate. The absence of any contest will contribute toward a harmonious and united campaign in the election itself, a specialty in which the Democratic Party in New Hampshire has shown some proficiency in recent years.

The distribution of candidates for the Congressional seats is closely related to the distribution of party strength in the State. The chief support of the Democratic Party in New Hampshire, like that of the party in Massachusetts, is to be found in the eastern section, where the City of Manchester lies. This section comprises the First Congressional District. The western part of the State, which embraces the Second Congressional District, is largely rural, or at least, nonindustrial. In the Second District, there is only one adventurous candidate for the Congressional seat, while seven are competing for the post in the First District.

In the Second District, the present incumbent, Congressman Charles W. Tobey, of Temple, is a candidate to succeed himself. Although there are four other candidates, the Congressman appears to be in little danger because of his wide personal following. In the First District, the leading contender is Secretary of State Enoch D. Fuller. In order to win, however, he must be able to count on the preponderance of the Manchester vote, which is likely to be split by the candidacy of Arthur B. Jenks, of that city.

For the governorship, the Democratic nomination is being sought without contest by the Speaker of the House, Amos N. Blandin, of Bath, while Maj. Francis F. Murphy, of Nashua, is the leading candidate and heir apparent to the Republican nomination.

One of the interesting aspects of the campaign is the general absence of French-Canadian names in the roster of candidates. There are large foreign population elements in the cities, particularly Nashua and Manchester, of which the French-Canadian colonies are important groups. But they do not seem to present the same problem to the politicos of New Hampshire as similar groups in Rhode Island. There is, for example, a strong insurgent candidacy in Rhode Island this year based upon an alleged slighting of national groups in the all important matter of appointments to political office.

Republicans Will Face Strong New Deal Opposition.

ALTHOUGH the number of aspirants for nomination in the New Hampshire primaries would seem to indicate that the Republicans feel that their time has come, the successful candidates will have opposition of the strongest kind. New Hampshire has fared well under the New Deal. Its balance for the last year with the Federal Government is markedly in its favor. Taxes to the amount of $4,124,421 were paid in to Washington, but $13,653,881 came back into the State from the Federal Government in one way or another.

In the matter of public works expenditures, New Hampshire has been one of the wisest of the New England States, for the constructions undertaken have been in the nature of capital investments and not merely made-work. A large winter commerce in the sports of the season has grown rapidly in the last few years and to this development, the Federal Government has made useful contributions. Ski trails and other enterprises of like nature have been built with Federal money, while other States have been constructing ornamental sidewalks, bridges with no approaches and lanes with no turnings.

It is more than possible, however, that the State Republican ticket will run ahead of the national ticket. One of the most important factors in bringing this result about (even if New Hampshire hadn't voted for Hoover in 1932) is the candidacy of Knox on the Republican ticket. He is by way of being a favorite son because of his long residence in the State. It was sound strategy for him to have rested some weeks this last summer at his residence in New Hampshire, identifying himself in this fashion with the people of the Granite State. It is doubtful whether this action was necessary to the success of the Republican national ticket in November, however, in view of the strong sentiment in the State for the national Republican standard-bearer.

Here, as elsewhere in New England, there is a strong variable factor in the candidacy of Lemke on the Union Party ticket. Admittedly his strength will be drawn from the cities, but the extent of it is a mystery. There is a considerable Townsend following in New Hampshire, but it is impossible to predict whether Lemke will be able to count on it and if so, how much. In a State with as fine a balance of strength between Republicans and Democrats as prevails in New Hampshire, serious damage can be done to the major candidacies by a strong third party. Whose ox will be gored, if anyone's, can better be told after the primaries.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Summer Must be Over.

I guess vacation time is over—
The summer's ended, I suppose;
The women I encounter lately
Are wearing, as a rule, some clothes.

No one on our front porch is naked,
And done, I think, the summer term is,
For now the view of sea and landscape
Is not just so much epidermis.

The butcher shop now looks quite proper—
The shopping scene is not distressing;
Few ladies do their shopping now
Before they've even thought of dressing.

The scene we see where'er encountered
No longer has the touch so Minsky;
And mothers now have dropped the thought
They're in some ballet with Nijinsky.

My grandma doesn't flaunt her thighs with Brazen manner growing more so,
And grandpa when he goes outdoors puts
Something warm around his torso.

The social section I can turn to
And not find some one's lovely daughter
Emerging for the world-wide press with Her naked mother from the water.

Or six or seven pages showing
Resort news gathered by the barrel
With illustrations of the masses
Devoid of very much apparel.

* * * *

I guess vacation time is over—
The nudes and such we look askance on;
The summer now is done, I KNOW it—
When dad's outdoors he keeps his pants on!

My Gal.

Boasting of her mountain climbing
She refused a hundred rides;
Nimbly over crags and boulders,
Marvelous her virile strides.
Crossing meadows, rocks and ridges,
Tangled hedge and stony path,
Nonchalantly she ascended
Sans the slightest aftermath.
She returned. We went out walking.
(This, precisely, is what rankles.)
We were strolling on the pavement
And she twisted both her ankles!

Greatest Evangelist

By William Lyon Phelps.

D. L. Moody.

The greatest of American evangelists was born nearly 100 years ago, at Northfield, Mass., on February 5, 1837. He died at Northfield, on December 22, 1899.

Extensive preparations are now being made for the world-wide celebration of the centenary of his birth, which will come next February. The campaign has just started with a brief but wholly admirable biography of him, written by the Irishman Arthur Percy Fitt, who was his secretary for years, and his son-in-law.

This book is called "Moody Still Lives," and is published by the Fleming H. Revell Co., New York.

There must be hundreds of thousands of persons living who heard Moody and Sankey. I remember very well in my boyhood when they came and held meetings for many weeks in the Rink at Hartford, Conn. Moody's preaching, although never sensational, produced a tremendous effect; and the results were permanent. There are many people living in Hartford now, who received inspiration from those speeches.

Some years later, when I was an undergraduate at Yale, Moody preached in the college chapel at least once a year; and although most clergymen made their sermons on those occasions brief, Moody always preached for an hour, and held the breathless attention of the students. He was a man of genius; his passionate religious faith was accompanied by such common sense, infallible judgment, humor and good taste, that he won and retained the respect of all classes of men and women.

His good judgment was shown especially in his attitude toward Prof. Henry Drummond, of Glasgow, whom he loved more than any other man. Drummond was professor of natural history and his viewpoint was different in many respects from that of Moody; but both men were alike in their sincerity and devotion. Repeatedly I heard them both speak from the same platform—the Fundamentalist and the Evolutionist, setting an example, that if it had been universally followed, would have saved many bitter and futile controversies.

Now this new book by Mr. Fitt is interesting on every page; it gives a portrait of Moody the Man. And what a man.

Medieval Realism

Scholar Urges Return To Philosophy Of Middle Ages, Submitting That Realism Offers Only Protection To Liberties.

Following are extracts from a lecture by Dr. Etienne Gilson, professor of philosophy at the College de France and director of the Toronto Institute of Medieval Studies, given at the Harvard Tercentenary Conference of Arts and Sciences last week.

SOME historians have attempted to describe medieval Europe as endowed with political unity of its own. It is partly true, and partly an illusion. In a way the Holy Roman Empire always remained a more or less abstract myth; it was a dream that never came fully true (except, perhaps, much later, in the beautiful books of Lord Bryce).

In the same way, it would be, just as correct to say that even mediaeval Christendom never quite succeeded in becoming a concrete and tangible reality. Christendom, that is to say a universal society of all Christians, tied together, even in the temporal order, by the bonds of their common faith and common charity; men thinking, feeling and behaving as true Christians should do; loving and helping each other as true children of the same Father who is in heaven, all those magnificent virtues have perhaps not been much more common in mediaeval societies than they now are.

The main difference between our mediaeval ancestors and ourselves does not lie there, it rather rests with their belief in the absolute value of those virtues. The best among them were fully convinced that there was an order of absolute religious truth, of absolute ethical goodness, of absolute political and social justice, to which differences had to submit and by which they had to be judged.

In other words, besides being members of various political and racial groups, those men felt themselves both members of the same church, and fellow citizens in a temporal community whose frontiers were the same as those of Christian faith itself. Irrespectively of their various countries, two Christians were always able to meet on the same metaphysical and moral grounds, with this result that no national considerations could ever be allowed to interfere with such questions. Religious life being the same for all, there was no reason why John of Salisbury should not have been appointed as a bishop of Chartres; and why indeed should French people have been appointed as professors at the University of Paris, since better men coming from foreign countries were at hand?

They were not asked by the university to teach what was French, but what was true. Thus did it come to pass, that viewing themselves as members of the same spiritual family, using a common language to impart to others the same fundamental truth, those mediaeval scholars succeeded in living and working together for about three centuries, and so long as they did, there was in the world, together with a vivid feeling for the universal character of truth, some sort at least of occidental unity.

Occidental Unity Seen As Recoverable.

IS IT NOW possible for us to recover it. I feel inclined to think so, at least to some extent, and under certain conditions. The first of those conditions being not to dream of the Middle Ages as of some lost paradise, or a golden age, to which it would be our imperative duty to go back as fast as possible. For the better and for the worse, we are now living in the twentieth century, and the only thing for us to do is to make the best of it. The disruption of mediaeval Europe into national groups, attended by the growth of more and more nationalized educational institutions, have been, as far as we can judge, practically unavoidable facts.

Let us frankly state that we are realists; that we do not care for a system of philosophy so personal that nobody else save ourselves would be ready to accept it. The true freedom of mind is to yield to the teaching of facts; to reject our own preconceived ideas every time somebody else is able to show us that they are wrong; in short, mental liberty consists in a complete liberation from our personal prejudices and in our complete submission to reality.

This is the true spirit of scholastic realism. And besides, it is Christian. The Gospel does not ask us to say: "It seems to me, hence it is; or I do not think so, hence it is not so;" but, "est est; non, non; that which is, is; that which is not, is not." Either we shall be free from things, and slaves to our minds, or free from our minds because submitted to things. Realism always was and still remains the source of our personal liberty. Let us add that for the same reason, it remains the only guarantee of our social liberty.

Personalism Also Cited As An Important Aim.

FOR IT IS a last and all important feature of mediaeval philosophy that its rationalism was not only a realism, but a personalism as well. Just as trees and any kind of living things, men are individualized and distinct from each other by their bodies; but at the difference of all irrational beings, men are persons by their intellects.

Now it is a remarkable character of intellectual knowledge, at least as mediaeval philosophers understood it, that it is in us both strictly personal and wholly universal. As a rational being, everyone of us is a person, that is to say an original source of true knowledge and of free determinations. Yet, precisely because and insofar as, no knowledge is rational, it is universal in its own right. Human reasons and human wills are bound to agree, to the full extent where everyone of them will keep faith with its own nature, which is to be rational.

Our only hope is therefore in a widely spread revival of the Greek and mediaeval principle, that truth, morality, social justice and beauty, are necessary and universal in their own right. Should philosophers, scientists, artists make up their minds to teach it, and if necessary to preach it in time and out of time, it would become known again that there is a spiritual order of realities whose absolute right it is to judge even the State, and eventually to free us from its oppression.

Such was the essential nature of mediaeval universalism; such also are the main reasons why it still is so meaningful for us. No nations, no races, no learned bodies have anything to lose by favoring such an attitude; never was the French influence more warmly welcomed, nor more universally felt than in the thirteenth century, when it exerted itself through that strange University of Paris, where not a single one of the most famous professors was French. This is one of the most useful lessons we still can learn from the Middle Ages, and one that should remain before our minds as a safeguard against the worst kind of slavery to which mankind is now being submitted by totalitarian states—mental slavery.

In the conviction that there is nothing in the world above universal truth, lies the very root of intellectual and social liberty.

Landon's Visit Brings Drama To Maine Vote

Institute of Public Opinion Weighs His Tour in Light of Its Polls.

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Sept. 11.—Polls of the Institute of Public Opinion indicate that Gov. Landon is taking no great risk in identifying himself with the fortunes of his party in the Maine State election Monday.

His barnstorming trip there tomorrow is not strategically necessary to clinch a Republican victory. Institute polls indicate that the local G. O. P. candidates will win in Maine by a sizable majority, almost approaching two to one. Gov. Landon's visit will simply serve to dramatize the impending victory.

The Institute polls voters on the Presidency alone. But the latest balloting indicates that if Maine citizens vote the same way in the State election as they would in a national election today, the Republican vote in Maine will be about 67 per cent of the major party total. Undoubtedly, however, Louis J. Brann, Democratic candidate for the Senate, will make a better showing than any of his party colleagues.

On his way from New York City to Portland tomorrow Gov. Landon will be passing through friendly territory. The three States in which he plans to make short speeches from the rear platform of his train as he swings north are Connecticut, Massachusetts and New Hampshire. Institute polls show him with a comfortable lead in each of these States today.

	Landon	Roosevelt
Conn.	58%	42%
Mass.	58	42
New Hamp.	55	45

All three States have voted Republican in every Institute poll since last December. Landon's public appearance in these States will thus be in the nature of a friendly gesture—a vote-keeping rather than a vote-getting maneuver.

States Trade Wool, Cloth to Aid Needy

Helena, Mont., Sept. 11 (AP).—Needy children of Montana and Iowa are assured of warm clothing this winter because of a "trade" made by relief commissioners of the two States.

"We've arranged to send the Iowa relief authorities 15,000 untanned sheep pelts, now stored at Miles City," explained Joseph Watson, Montana relief director. "Iowa will pull the wool, make it into cloth and send 11,000 yards back here, ready-cut in garment styles.

"Our WPA sewing rooms will make clothing for Montana youngsters and Iowa will keep enough of our wool to pay for the cost of producing the cloth."

Watson said he was trying to arrange a "trade" with the relief administration at Minneapolis in which pelts would be exchanged for sheep-lined garments and gloves.

"All three States will gain, but there is no profit-making by any State," Watson said. He said Federal relief authorities had agreed to pay the freight cost in the exchanges.

Apple Crop in Va. Is 49 Per Cent Off

Richmond, Va., Sept. 11 (AP).—The Federal-State crop reporting service today predicted a commercial apple crop in Virginia of 5,503,000 bushels, 51 per cent of last year's production, as the result of insufficient moisture, worm and hail damage.

Henry M. Taylor, agricultural statistician, estimated the total Virginia crop at 8,228,000 bushels, as compared with 16,895,000 bushels in 1935 and a five-year average from 1928-1932, of 13,160,000 bushels. The commercial crop last year totaled 13,716,000 bushels.

"The condition of the commercial apple crop in Virginia on September 1 showed a slight decline from August 1 and was about one-half that reported September 1 last year," he said.

"The lack of sufficient moisture for the best growth was felt in most sections during August. Apples on the whole will be from 15 to 20 per cent smaller in size than last year, according to reports from growers, and a larger percentage than usual will pack out the smaller sizes.

Augie Kieckhefer Dies, Ex-Billiard Champion

Chicago, Sept. 11 (AP).—Augie Kieckhefer, 47, ten times holder of the world three-cushion billiard championship and for years one of the best known players of the game, died today at his home of a blood clot on the brain.

Kieckhefer, a native of Milwaukee, last held the world three-cushion title in 1932, winning it at Chicago in a "comeback" attempt after announcing he was retiring. His first championship was the Wisconsin pocket billiard title which he captured in 1907. In 1918 he set a record which still stands—making 150 points in 132 innings.

Telephone Turns Solo to Duet, Bass to Soprano, Parley Hears

Instrument Is for Study of Voice, Bell Expert Asserts at Harvard Tercentenary; Conversion of Trees to Food Reported by Nobel Winner.

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 11.—A new kind of telephone which mimics the human voice was demonstrated today to the Harvard Tercentenary.

It does more than a human being can do. It can change a woman's voice into a man's or bass into soprano. It can convert a single voice into a duet, either of speech or song.

A bass singer could sound like two persons simultaneously, one bass, the other soprano, tenor or any desired tone.

Some of these stunts of the new electrical mimic were demonstrated by Dr. Frank B. Jewett, head of the Bell Telephone laboratories. The phone is a new instrument, never shown before, and Dr. Jewett said it was invented not for telephoning, but to study the voice.

He also showed a new device by which heat in a wire can be heard. Amplified, the heat waves sounded like a booming surf.

Dr. Friedrich Bergius, German Nobel prize winner in chemistry, told how trees can be converted into sugar, fat and protein, the three main food requirements of human beings. An army might live on trees under the processes described by Dr. Bergius.

Discusses Race Strife.

Whether the races of the East and the West shall "clash" was declared by Prof. Masharu Anesaki, of the University of Tokyo, to be the "greatest question of world history."

The arts and sciences portion of Harvard's tercentenary celebration ended today. Next week medicine will be considered for two days and afterward 15,000 persons are expected for a three-day celebration. The climax will be Friday, with a speech by President Roosevelt, of the Harvard class of 1904.

The mimic telephone adds one new part to an ordinary phone. This part is big enough to cover one side of a room. It takes the electrical impulses that flow from an ordinary phone. It does not transmit them. Instead, it analyzes them and then builds up a new voice in electricity.

Heard in Ordinary Way.

This new mimicking electrical voice is then transmitted to a loud speaker or a receiver and heard in the ordinary manner.

The one-man or one-woman duet is made possible by the fact that the mimicking voice can be transmitted simultaneously with the original voice. It is exactly the same as two persons talking on one wire—except in this case one is a real electrical ghost.

After the electrical mimic has constructed the ghost voice, the turn of dials will change tones and pitches, so that a masculine voice becomes feminine. The altered ghost voices have any discords of the original voice, but no more.

The new development which makes it commercially possible to convert trees into food, Dr. Bergius said, was discovery of a method to obtain concentrated hydrochloric acid, and materials to contain the acid.

Treated With Acid.

Trees are shredded, the pulp dried on drums and the dry stuff treated with the concentrated acid.

The immediate result, Dr. Bergius said, is five kinds of sugar. Some of these could be made edible for humans, he said. That is not now done, but the sugars are converted into alcohol. One ton of wood yields 90 gallons of alcohol.

A byproduct is obtained commercially for feeding livestock. Its food value, the Noble laureate said, equals barley. It can be stored for long periods.

For human nutrition, in emergency, he said three steps are practicable. One, to refine the sugars. Two, to feed the tree "barley" to pigs to form fat. Three, to treat the "hydrolized wood" with yeast, obtaining protein.

"In other words," said Dr. Bergius, "it is possible to produce practically all the fundamental elements of nutrition from wood."

Experts Bite the Dust.

Unless average contract players are a great deal less human than I think they are, they probably feel sadistic satisfaction on hearing about the "falls of the mighty." Certainly they have to listen to or read a plethora of tales in which the experts are glorified. So now I rush to the rescue with a hand on which 18 of the Nation's leading lights bit the dust, and that, in a recent tournament of first importance! Only two declarers, in the common contract of four hearts, played correctly and were successful.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 heart	Pass	1 spade	Pass
2 hearts	Pass	3 hearts	Pass
4 hearts	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the diamond king and, when his partner played the eight, followed with the ace and another diamond, which East ruffed. The club queen was returned and declarer won. Now it was quite obvious that the only danger of losing the contract lay in finding all the trumps in one hand, otherwise two leads of trumps would account for the outstanding ones, and then the hand could be laid down, since declarer would have an easy ruff of his only losing club.

At every table the ace of hearts was laid down to investigate the trump situation. This, of course, was correct since a follow by both East and West would have allowed declarer to spread his cards. But when it was found that West held the outstanding three trumps only two declarers embarked on the proper line of play. They continued to lead out trumps until, with one remaining, all hands were reduced to four cards. Declarer's were one spade, one trump and the king and another club; dummy's were a club and three spades; West's were inconsequential, but East found himself on thin ice with the jack-ten of clubs and king-jack of spades. South led the last heart, and, discarding a spade from the dummy, squeezed East into discarding the stopper of one of the black suits. Which ever he chose, South took the rest of the tricks.

At the other tables, after finding the bad trump break, the king of clubs was laid down and a club led for a ruff. But this was duck soup for West, who, on the third club, had only to discard one of his two spades to be assured of defeating the contract. The club ruff landed the play in the dummy, and now there was no way for the declarer to return to his hand in order to draw trumps without conceding a trump trick to West. The attempt to ruff the second round of spades could not avail since West would overruff a low trump or preserve his jack for the winning trick if declarer ruffed high.

On pure analysis these declarers should have seen that their play could not work! West already had disclosed a holding of six diamonds and three hearts. The four cards remaining, divided any way that the declarer could have chosen, would not permit the ruffing of a third round of clubs. If West had one club and three spades he would ruff the second club lead; if two and two, what actually happened would take place, and three clubs and one spade would have given precisely the same result. Moreover, and this is important, since West had not overcalled the one heart bid, which he would have been certain to do had he held the king of spades in addition to the good diamond suit he had shown, East should have been marked with that important king.

'Anthony' Film Seemingly Fails To Justify Size

Earle Feature Is Worthy, but Issues No Loud Click; Other Bills.

By Gerald G. Gross.

(Substituting for Nelson B. Bell)

"ANTHONY ADVERSE." Warner Bros.' film version of a novel by Hervey Allen, screen play by Sheridan Gibney, starring Fredric March and featuring Olivia de Haviland, Donald Woods, Anita Louise, Edmund Gwenn, Claude Rains, Billy Mauch and others. Musical score by Erich Wolfgang Korngold. Directed by Mervyn LeRoy. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

It is not easy to give the Warners' rendition of Hervey Allen's best seller, now at the Earle, a fair appraisal. Though well-cast from top to bottom, none of the players gives a performance that is outstanding unless it be Akim Tamiroff in the brief bit of a Cuban handshaker. Though the narrative is set forth with interest, it contains little or nothing commending it to memory. Though the picture has been faithful (we are told) to both the spirit and the letter of the book, allowing for condensation, we cannot but voice doubt that "Anthony Adverse" is worth two and a quarter hours of one's time.

Much is expected, financially speaking, of the picture and it will be interesting to see how it fares in this respect, here and elsewhere. At the garish premiere in Hollywood a few weeks ago, one commentator reported "the preview audience was emphatic in demonstrating its opinion that it believed it had been looking at one of the great pictures of the year."

That "Anthony" has merit, there can be no doubt. It is strong in story value, studded with such respected names as Edmund Gwenn, Ralph Morgan, Fritz Leiber, Claude Rains and Pedro de Cordoba, technically mounted in a manner that brooks no criticism, skilfully scored by Korngold and ably directed by Mervyn LeRoy. Still the sum somehow falls short of equalling the total of its component parts. To say it is destined to be one of the great pictures of this or any year is extravagant praise.

Story of Anthony.

Frederic March, as the title character, is required to place no great strain on his talen in filling the part of a disillusioned young man who begins life as a foundling and spends his first 30 or so years, which is his screen span, being very unhappy. The fadeout finds him not in the arms of his beloved, Olivia de Haviland, but aboard a boat bound for Mexico to perform a gold-smuggling errand for Napoelon and resigned to the fate of a cuckold.

Born of the illicit love of a Scotch merchant's daughter, wife of a Spanish grandee, and a handsome army officer, the infant, Anthony, is abandoned at the entrance of an Italian convent by the outraged nobleman after he kills his wife's lover in a duel. The mother died at Anthony's birth.

At the age of 10, the child is apprenticed to an Italian business house owned by his own grandfather, though the relationship is unknown. The old man had been told by his Spanish son-in-law that infant, as well as mother, died in childbirth.

It is not long until grandfather discovers the boy's identity, through a Madonna statuette which had been his daughter's, but for the sake of propriety he does not confide in Anthony. The latter grows up in the firm, falls in love with a girl of humble parentage and weds her.

Cast Is Capable.

On the day of the marriage he receives orders to sail for Havana to collect a debt. His bride of only a few hours joins an opera troupe. The grandfather's proud old firm, caught in a depression resulting from the Napoleonic wars, shuts its doors.

In Cuba Anthony learns that the company indebted to his employer has moved to Africa to deal in slaves. He follows, determined to perform his mission. He becomes a slave trader himself, enmeshed by the wiles of a half-caste girl, until a dying priest makes him promise to return to Italy.

Back home our hero finds his employer (grandfather) dead. He also finds his wife, now a mistress to Napoelon, and a son. The gallant wife and mother turns custody of the boy over to Anthony and they ship for the New World.

Miss de Havilland, as the wife of Anthony; Claude Rains, as the vindictive Don Luis; Anita Louise, in the role of Anthony's mother; Edmund Gwenn, cast as the grandfather—all are capable in this attenuated attraction. Donald Woods, Gale Sondergaard, Billy Mauch, Luis Alberni, Henry O'Neill and all the others in the large cast also deserve credit. So does Fredric March, though its hardly probable he will be remembered for his Anthony Adverse.

RKO-Keith's

"SWING TIME." RKO-Radio picturization of an original story by Erwin Gelsen and Howard Lindsay, adapted to the screen by Allen Scott, co-starring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, with Victor Moore, Eric Blore, Georges Metaxa, Helen Broderick and dancing ensemble. Music by Jerome Kern. Directed by George Stevens. Second week.

Although its "Mr. Bojangles of Harlem" number stands out as the most fetching dance routine ever presented in motion pictures, "Swing Time" is not another "Top Hat."

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers perhaps never pooled their hoofing gifts to better advantage than they do in the current feature at RKO-Keith's, which entered its second week yesterday, yet "Swing Time" can hardly be considered the peak of the cycle of dancing musicals which the couple have made.

Perhaps the fault lies partly in Jerome Kern's score which, though tuneful, suffers by comparison with the consistently good songs of "Top Hat" and its immediate successor, "Follow the Fleet." More reasonable is the possibility that a weak plot, if such it may be called, deserves most of the blame for "Swing Time's" seeming failure to come up to expectations.

Most plausible explanation, however, is that the agile Fred and beauteous Ginger have set such a high standard in their co-starring vehicles that we have been spoiled, always expecting their new picture to be better than the one that went before. So enough of this negative praise!

Plots and everything else may and should be relegated into insignificance when the couple go into their dances. They are as delightful as ever in every "Swing Time" routine that brings them together. And in that Bojangles number, Astaire flashes an ingenious barrage of taps that certainly must end all controversy as to the world's greatest and most versatile tap dancer.

Frozen faced Helen Broderick and that stage recruit, Victor Moore, make a hilarious comedy team, and Eric Blore, with his own brand of humor, is another whose place in the cast is indispensable.

"Swing Time" may not be another "Top Hat," but it is certainly most worthy of your time if you are in the market for the best dancing of its kind extant, adequately trimmed with pretty songs and brittle comedy.

To augment the feature, Manager Hardie Meakin yesterday brought in the latest issue of "March of Time," which deals with the Rev. Gerald Smith, Passamaquoddy and milk purification. G. G. G.

"A SON COMES HOME." Paramount picturization of a story by Harry Hervey, with screen play by Sylvia Thalberg; featuring Mary Boland, Julie Haydon, Donald Woods and Anthony Nace. Directed by A. E. Dupont. Reviewed Friday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

Stories penned about the idea of the indestructibility of faith and affection of the mater familias are, by the very nature of things, very apt to be saccharinely sentimental, and not infrequently tear-jerking.

While "A Son Comes Home," offering an infrequently told variation of the well-known theme, is keyed to play upon the emotions, it successfully avoids pitfalls which have trapped earlier ventures along the same path. It is sentimental, but thanks to the ungushing brand of histrionics displayed by Mary Boland the picture becomes a reasonably convincing drama of maternal affection.

It seems that Mary Grady's recalcitrant, if not actually delinquent, son had run away from home and had never been heard of since, but through the years she had always hoped for his return. Denny, embroiled in a murder, seeks Mary's largesse, posing as her son; she recognizes the fraud but carries the illusion to the end when it is ultimately revealed that the murderer is her own son, who is killed in endeavoring to escape capture.

An amorous thread, involving Denny and Jo, another of Mary's charges, courses the narrative, but it is the major situation of the son coming home that is the dominating aspect of the picture. As the proprietress of a San Franscisco Harbor cafe, Miss Boland essays a role very different from those she has in association with Charles Ruggles. Here she is forthright, without any of those effervescent qualities of earlier appearances, and reveals, through this generally hidden facet of her accomplishment, an actress of even greater histrionic stature.

Miss Boland is commendably supported by Donald Woods, as the befriended boy; Anthony Nace, as the real son, and Julie Haydon, as the girl in question. The other members of the cast are just as competent as these.

"Straight as an Arrow" presents a fascinating study of archery, with Howard Hill, considered as America's foremost exponent of the ancient art, the central character not only in revealing handling of the weapon, but also the making of the instruments.

Spanky and Alfalfa, together with Grandma, are seen in "Second Childhood," one of the better Our Gang comedies, showing the rejuvenation of the grande dame by the kids. A release of the Metrotone News rounds out the program.

Metropolitan

"STATE FAIR." Twentieth Century-Fox re-issue of the Fox picturization of the novel by Phil Stong, with screen play by Paul Green and Sonya Levien; starring Will Rogers, supported by Janet Gaynor, Lew Ayres, Sally Eilers, Norman Foster, Louise Dresser, Frank Craven and Victor Jory. Directed by Henry King. Reviewed (revival) by W. A. Whitney.

It matters little at this time which of the many pictures in which he was starred is brought back—Will Rogers will be seen and thoroughly enjoyed. Indeed, one cannot append the usual "the late" to Mr. Rogers' name, for he is too vitally a part of this present generation of cinemagoers to be aught but here with us yet. His homely philosophy, his unassuming presence, his very human words and acts—all these have endeared him to the American public and have been engraved upon the imperishable tablets of memory.

Many have considered "State Fair" as his finest work, but in its current revival one is not concerned with Mr. Rogers' vicissitudes of entering Blue Boy (since called to his porcine fathers) in the state fair, of the romance between Janet Gaynor and Lew Ayres, or that of Sally Eilers and Norman Foster, or of the other narrative complications of the piece, rather is one desirous again of relaxing under those unpretentious, human elements of entertainment always associated with the productions of Mr. Rogers.

Thus, "State Fair" needs no review: Mr. Rogers and his public have long since done that far better than is possible or even desirable at this time. This, however, might be added (that these remarks may, at least, appear to be a "review"), "State Fair" is a picture which all can enjoy, and, like the thing of beauty which is a joy forever, have that pleasure the greater with another viewing. Of course, if one has been sufficiently unfortunate as not to have seen the picture, then by all means it should be added to the "must" list.

Although "State Fair" has itself all those elements of well-rounded entertainment, two short subjects—together with the usual combined releases of the Paramount and the Universal News reels—have been added. "Mad Money," the first of the Court of Human Relations series, reveals the consequences of unbridled spending as the result of holding a winning sweepstakes ticket. The series is based on a radio program, and this, the inaugural release, while sufficiently dramatic, leaves something to be desired in casting and acting. The other subject is "Lover's Paradise," a technicolor travelogue of Tahiti and its riot of color in sea, sky, and vegetation. The "Pagan Love Song" is nicely used as background music.

Palace

"THE GORGEOUS HUSSY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the novel by Samuel Hopkins Adams, adapted to the screen by Ainsworth Morgan and Stephen Morehouse Avery, starring Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor and Lionel Barrymore, supported by Melvyn Douglas, Franchot Tone, Beulah Bondi, Sidney Toler and James Stewart. Directed by Clarence Brown. Reviewed third week, by Sally Stroud.

This story of a tavern keeper's daughter, Peggy O'Neale, her life and loves may be "fiction based upon historical fact," yet it retains enough fact to make it seem authentic.

Joan Crawford as Peggy may not be your own personal conception of the glamorous hoyden, but she carries the role with grace and distinction. The three men with whom her destiny was interwoven, a sailor (Robert Taylor), a Senator (Melvyn Douglas, as John Randolph), and a Cabinet member (Franchot Tone as John Eaton, Secretary of War), give excellent support in their varying roles.

Friend to Andy Jackson and his wife Rachael (Lionel Barrymore and Beulah Bondi), Peggy gave and received spiritual and physical support. When Jackson's wife wilted and died under a blast of malicious gossip, he "reared up in his sinful temper" when the same catastrophe threatened lovely young Peggy.

The chances are that you will longer remember Rachael smoking her clay pipe and uttering homely truths, and Andy wading in to do battle for a cherished cause, than any of the other bits which comprise the plot. Most exciting of these Jacksonian flurries is his routing the scandal mongers, some of whom were his cabinet members.

Senators Webster and Randolph have some amusing battles about States' rights, there is quite a bit of romancing, and Alison Skipworth tosses her head around as she serves as cheer leader for the gossip squad.

Concerning itself with two pickaninnies and a houn' dawg, the Harmon-Ising cartoon offered as chief short subject is one of the most technically perfect yet screened. A Pete Smith specialty and lengthy newsreel complete the visual bill of fare.

Indian Thriller Making Friends At the Capitol

'Last of the Mohicans' Puts Cooper on Screen; Good Stage Bill.

"THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS." A Reliance production, distributed by United Artists, based on James Fenimore Cooper's classic novel, with screen play by Philip Dunne, and featuring Randolph Scott, Binnie Barnes, Henry Wilcoxon, Bruce Cabot and Heather Angel. Directed by George B. Seitz. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris.

How'd you like to see the beginnings of a swell burning at the stake? Or some not too refined Indian torture? Or a spot of scalping?

Then the "Last of the Mohicans" now at the Capitol is just your dish. And if you want to toss in an excuse for seeing this roaring picture of turbulent Colonial days, just tell your friends that its historical value intrigues you, also that you want to see a picture that does justice to the late and very great James Fenimore Cooper. You will be right on all counts.

For sheer sweep of action, for adventure that keeps the audience google-eyed, for delineating with approximate truth one of the most exciting periods of American history—"The Last of the Mohicans" deserves gold stars, silver buttons and big birthday cake.

Laid in the period of the unbelievably savage French and Indian warfare of early Colonial days, "The Last of the Mohicans" sticks close enough to the Cooper book to satisfy the verities. It has all of the important characters—the noble Uncas and the Sagamore Chingachgook, the evil Magua and, of course, the incomparable Natty Leatherstocking, who is called simply Hawkeye.

Randy Scott is perfectly cast as Hawkeye. The coolness and certain hardness, which handicap him in some roles are positive assets in the part of Hawkeye.

Robert Barrat and Phillip Reed as Uncas and Chingachgook, last of the great Mohican tribe, add mightily to the picture. Another fine bit of casting is in the choice of Henry Wilcoxon as the stiff-backed British major. Bruce Cabot makes a Magua quite properly devilish.

Binnie Barnes and the spirituelle Heather Angel fit in delightfully as Col. Munro's lovely daughters although the small boy who sat next to this critic persisted in grunting with disdain every time that Hawkeye went a bit sweet on Binnie Barnes. But small boys are like that. They can't bear a minute out from the Injuns and sharp-shooting and war whoops.

Above all "The Last of the Mohicans" is a triumph in casting and timing. It is one picture in which you will not be able to find a lax moment or a draggy sequence.

As for the top bits of action, there is the massacre at Fort William Henry (which really occurred), the torture of Hawkeye by squaws as a prelude to his burning (also historically correct), the chase of the war canoes and the leap of Heather Angel from the cliff rather than fall into the clutches of the evil Magua.

Phil Lampkin has fixed up a special overture for the "Last of the Mohicans. It's a good overture, too, but a bit on the pure melody side. We think there should have been a few war-whoops and that the suave Fox drummer lad should have been worked to death this week in honor of the Indians.

Hal Sherman is that rarest of birds—a really original dancer and comedian. Also, he's such a good guy that he will let the audience tell him what to dance—and then surprises them almost out of their boots. His fan dance makes a few folks blush—through their giggles, and his "La Cucharacha" and tango are,—hah, stupendous is the word.

Carl Emmy's diamond-collared foxterriers grab not a dog's share, but a lion's share of applause, and deserve it.

Janette Hackett and the Elida Dancers contribute some rather charming spectacles, the last "Ballet in Blue" and Miss Hackett's dance with a marionette partner being especially satisfying.

Dolly Kay, besides having a great sense of harmony and a frank ingratiating way with her, knows how to put songs over with power. We wish she'd let herself go with one big straight song amid all those clever and complicated effects.

The Red Pavilion

—By Pauline Stiles—

SYNOPSIS.

Shortly after the World War Roger Mallard, handsome young Englishman, is embittered by the loss of hearing in one ear from a war injury. Mal has been raised by his godfather, William Grimwold, an actor. Grimmy persuades Mal to attend a New Year's Eve party where he meets lovely young Pamella Wyeth, though he forgets her on meeting Zelda Manners. A month later Mal married Zelda. After two years the marriage ends disastrously. In a rage at his failure to make a living on the stage, Zelda flings a mirror at Mal and unknowingly destroys the hearing in his other ear. Fourteen years later, under Grimmy's tutelage, Mal has become a great success in pictures, hiding his affliction from his public. Zelda has refused him a divorce. Pamella Wyeth has a home in Pasadena. David Barkley, son of an old friend, boards with her. At the premiere of Mal's latest film David meets Ellen Greer and invites her to a New Year's Eve party at the hotel where Mallard lives, and asks Pamella along as chaperon. Mal is mourning the sudden death of Grimmy. He writes a letter of resignation to his producer. David, as a joke on Ellen, has a boy page her with a message that Roger Mallard wants to meet her. Mal, skilful at lip reading, is sitting at the next table. Attracted by Pamella, Mal introduces himself and asks to join their party. Jealous at Ellen's interest in Mal, David takes her off, deserting Pamella. Mal persuades Pamella to let him take her home.

CHAPTER XII.

Peaceful Silence.

While Pamella busied herself lighting candles in the nine-branched candelabra which were placed in the great windows overlooking the garden and the light-spattered valley below, Mal roamed about the room like a pleased boy.

"Charming! Charming!"

"You do like my white elephant, then?"

She could see his quick eyes taking in the room's delightful appointments. Pam looked it over, too, but a bit on the pure melody side. We think there should have been a few war-whoops and that the suave Fox drummer lad should have been worked to death this week in honor of the Indians.

Hal Sherman is that rarest of birds—a really original dancer and comedian. Also, he's such a good guy that he will let the audience tell him what to dance—and then surprises them almost out of their boots. His fan dance makes a few folks blush—through their giggles, and his "La Cucharacha" and tango are,—hah, stupendous is the word.

Carl Emmy's diamond-collared foxterriers grab not a dog's share, but a lion's share of applause, and deserve it.

Janette Hackett and the Elida Dancers contribute some rather charming spectacles, the last "Ballet in Blue" and Miss Hackett's dance with a marionette partner being especially satisfying.

Dolly Kay, besides having a great sense of harmony and a frank ingratiating way with her, knows how to put songs over with power. We wish she'd let herself go with one big straight song amid all those clever and complicated effects.

having opened up her heart, and the thought she caught a glint of tears in Roger Mallard's eyes, but concluded she's been mistaken when he asked abruptly: "Did you face it?"

"Yes, I tried to. I stopped fancying I heard things I didn't. I stopped poking around in it here and there, half expecting to find horrors. And the stillness of my house doesn't bother me any more, now. I've grown to love it."

She was surprised to find his eyes flooding her face with a look of such depth and intensity it seemed to pierce straight through to her innermost self. Pamella didn't know which stirred her most, the unfathomable look in his eyes fixed so broodingly upon her or the shattered look in his face. She saw for the first time that it was shockingly tired. No vestige was left in it of fun and gaity of the evening.

Then she decided that the events of this amazing evening had intoxicated her imagination and colored her thought of things too melodramatically. After all, the talk he led her into was quiet and sane enough. He seemed immensely interested in her and her background and the prosaic round of her daily pursuits.

"And you've never married?"

"Are you going to worry about that like every one else?"

"Yes, until you tell me."

Triumphs Avoided.

"In a way too long to tell. . . . And Ruben, my old black butler, would say, 'You oughtn't to be here alone. Somebody oughta be takin' care of you. Besides, it's life, Miss Pam. It's life, and you oughta have it.'"

Pamella was never given to talk about herself, yet afterward she realized that she had glibly poured forth a lot that was all too revealing. The man was uncanny. It seemed to her that his thought jumped to meet hers and caught her meaning before it was spoken. He even got her to dipping down into some of her most secret longings. And as for her fears, she strung them on a string, one after another, and positively dangled them before his face. What had possessed her? What could this man be thinking?

He told her.

"You are not only a very understanding young woman, Miss Wyeth, but a brave one."

"Please forgive me. I've done all the talking. Now it's your turn. Is your life just made up of one triumph after another, Mr. Mallard?"

He laughed at this, and for the first time she didn't like it.

"Triumphs! I'll say this much, you're the first woman I've ever met to whom I'd like to tell the truth about them. But don't let's talk about it," he broke off. "Just be quiet. Let me be quiet. Let me look at you."

Pamella had no wish to be looked at in the microscopic way he was doing it. It made her wonder a little too uneasily how he saw her.

"You are lovely—fundamentally lovely—through and through."

She was ashamed at the gush of delight that left her quivering as she heard him say this. And to cover up her delight, which she didn't care to have him notice, she advised him anxiously, though not inhospitably, to phone for his car.

"Are you getting tired of me?"

"O, no!"

"Then, there's no hurry. Besides, when I leave you I think I'd rather walk down your hills in the darkness."

"But it's miles down. And the trolley stops running."

"I'll take a taxi. . . . Don't send me away just yet!"

R. R. Coker, Lois Walters Are Engaged

Daughter of Member of Little Cabinet to Wed Oct. 24.

Sister to Be Her Only Attendant; Scene to Be Chosen Later.

By Marylyn Reeve.

The Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Theodore A. Walters today announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Lois Walters, to Mr. Robert R. Coker, of Hartsville, S. C. This is rather an inter-cabinet romance, for Mr. Coker's stepmother, Mrs. David R. Coker, is the former Miss Margaret May Roper, daughter of the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper.

Last year when Miss Marjorie Talman's engagement was announced to Senor Don Mario Rodriguez, then First Secretary of the Chilean Embassy, there followed in bewildering succession other romances of the Diplomatic Corps. Hardly a week passed that did not bring out the betrothal of a daughter of one of the envoys or one of the young diplomats. Now the spotlight is being turned on the Little Cabinet and one wonders if there will now follow an avalanche of romances in the official set.

Mr. and Mrs. Coker have been frequent visitors here at the home of Mrs. Coker's parents, Secretary and Mrs. Roper. Miss Walters, a close friend of Mrs. Frank Bohn, the former Miss Grace Roper, wife of Dr. Frank Bohn, and sister of Mrs. Coker, became acquainted with them when she accompanied Dr. and Mrs. Bohn to informal parties given in their honor at the Roper home. It was not until last spring, however, at a dinner given by the Bohn's in their apartment, that the prospective bridegroom and Miss Walters met.

The wedding will take place October 24, but no decision has been made as to where the ceremony will be performed or by whom. Miss Ione Walters will be her sister's only attendant. Mr. Coker will arrive today to spend the week-end with the Walters.

After the wedding the young couple will reside in Hartsville, where the Coker family has been prominent since before the Revolutionary War.

Miss Walters is a graduate of the University of Idaho and received her M. A. degree from the University of California. She is a member of Delta Gamma Sorority and of the D. A. R. For the past three years she has been head of the history department of Arlington Hall Junior College for Girls.

Mr. Coker is a graduate of the Webb School in Tennessee, and of the University of South Carolina.

Miss Sullivan Becomes Bride

Is Married to Mr. English in Caldwell Hall Chapel at Catholic U.

Caldwell Hall Chapel of Catholic University was the scene of the wedding at 10 a. m. yesterday of Miss Rosemary Sullivan, daughter of Mrs. Thomas A. Sullivan, to Mr. Joseph Francis English, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. English, of Scranton, Pa. The Rev. Frank P. Cassidy performed the ceremony, which was followed by a reception for members of the family and close friends at the bride's home.

The latter had as her only attendant her sister, Mrs. Clifton Aires, who wore a brown velour dress and matching hat and carried yellow chrysanthemums. Dr. Thomas J. English, of Philadelphia, was his brother's best man.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her mother, wore a gown of opalescent satin and carried a bouquet of talisman roses, lilies of the valley and orchids.

After a wedding trip to Havana and Nassau, Mr. and Mrs. English will reside in Scranton.

Rep. Caroline O'Day Honored by Mrs. Backer

Representative Caroline O'Day, of New York, and Miss Marion Dickerman, close friend of Mrs. Roosevelt, were guests of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. George Backer, of Oyster Bay, Long Island, following a regional conference of Democratic women of Nassau and Suffolk Counties. Mrs. O'Day and Miss Dickerman spoke at a reception which followed the luncheon.

Marie Louise Howser Engaged to Mr. Davis

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rutledge Howser have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marie Louise Howser, to Mr. Harry Porter Davis, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. David Melling Davis.

The wedding will take place early in the winter.

On Wedding Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyril R. Kines, who were married last Tuesday, are on a honeymoon through the New England States, and will live at 915 Shepherd street upon their return to Washington.

Mrs. Kines, the former Miss Hazel Bence Spitzer, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Spitzer. Her wedding took place at the Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church, the Rev. C. E. Hawthorne officiating.

Taylors to Come.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Taylor (the latter was Miss Nona McAdoo, daughter of Senator McAdoo) will spend part of the season in Washington. They have been in Europe. They will go first to Newport, where Miss Fernanda de Mohrenschildt, Mrs. Taylor's daughter by her first marriage, is at their summer home.

(Below) The newly appointed Minister of Bolivia and Senora de Guachalla, who arrived in Washington yesterday and are staying at the Mayflower. Spanish Chancery Parties End As Attaches Resign, Go Home

Gay Functions, Eagerly Anticipated by Capital Debutantes and Dowagers in Past Years, Stilled as Revolution Flares.

By Dudley Harmon.

It looks as though the pleasant supper parties in the bachelor apartments of the Spanish chancery, which used to be the delight of debutantes and dowagers, have, like so many other good things, come to a definite end. Gone from Washington are the three popular attaches of the Embassy who used to live there—the first secretary, Senor Don Luis Olivares, and the two second secretaries, Senor Don Ramon, Padilla and Senor Don Jose Gregario.

Senor Olivares has packed the shelf of silver trophies he won in golf and tennis and is now in New York, whence, it is reported, he will sail next week for Spain. Senor Gregario, the first to resign, is also in New York, and Senor Padilla is now "somewhere in Spain" as a member of the signal corps of the rebel army.

The dinners they gave at the chancery used to consist mainly of Spanish dishes, the piece de resistance of which was often a huge bowl of Spanish rice covered with a piquant tomato sauce. The wines were from the estates of Olivares' family, who are to wine making in Spain what the Polignacs are to the champagne industry of France.

Seldom were there more than six or eight guests present, and afterwards they danced, to Spanish tangos and rhumbas or dressed up in costumes and acted in skits written by their friends.

The Counselor and Senora de Yrujo, and the Agricultural Attache and Senora de Echegaray were often among the guests at these informal parties. No word has been received from them since the revolution broke out. The Echegarays were on the boat bound for Europe when it first began, but since they had planned to go from Paris to Lithuania, to visit the family of Senora de Echegaray, it is thought that they are safe. The Counselor and Senora de Yrujo have been in Spain since early last spring, when they left for what was to have been a six months' vacation.

The only member of the embassy staff who has not resigned is the commercial attache, Senor Don Juan Terrasa, who is at present receiving only half pay from the government, but considers himself lucky to be remembered at all in the confusion. Senor Terrasa, who looks remarkably like Kepi Schell, Secretary of the Hungarian Legation, is living at the Shoreham.

Takoma Church Scene of Gala Wedding Rites

Miss Margaret Hutchinson Becomes Bride of Robert Graves.

The wedding of Miss Margaret Carol Hutchinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Hutchinson, jr., of Takoma Park, to Mr. Robert Graves, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ralph Graves, of Kensington, Md., took place yesterday afternoon at the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church. The Rev. R. Paul Schearrer, pastor, performed the ceremony.

The altar was banked with palms and vari-colored gladioli. The bride wore a redingote of lace over satin, fashioned with a row of tiny buttons down the front, long sleeves and a high collar. Her veil of tulle was held in place at the back of her head with a spray of orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of bride roses, gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Hestor Rayner, of Washington, who was the maid of honor, wore a torquoise blue evening gown of satin with a net coat of the same shade and a crownless, brimmed hat of net. She carried Johanna Hill roses.

The bridesmaids were Miss Marie Graves, of Kensington, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Eloise Dahn, of Washington; Miss Mary Bietler, of Baltimore, and Miss Virginia Hutchinson, sister of the bride. They were costumed alike in pastel green gowns of the same style as that of the maid of honor, and carried talisman roses.

Mr. John Wurtz served as best man and the ushers were Mr. Edwin B. Morris, jr., Mr. Robert Davidson, Mr. John Bourke and Mr. Henry Waller, all of Washington.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ward S. Pringle, of Chicago; Miss Eva F. Smith, Mr. Charles Berry, of New York; Mr. Frank Craw, of Philadelphia, and Miss Winifred Goodman, of Newport News.

After a wedding trip, the couple will make their home at 2221 Fortieth place, where they will be at home after September 23.

Mrs. Graves attended the University of Maryland, of which Mr. Graves is a graduate. He also attended Washington and Lee and is a member of Beta Theta Phi.

October 17 Picked As Wedding Date By Alicia Tumulty

Miss Alicia Anne Tumulty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Tumulty, has chosen October 17 as the date of her wedding to Mr. John Donnelly, son of Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly, of Boston, Mass.

The ceremony, which will be one of the outstanding social events of the fall season, will take place in St. Matthew's Church. It will be followed by a large reception. Miss Tumulty has not yet selected the members of her bridal party.

Mr. Tumulty was secretary to President Wilson. With his family, he is now at their summer home at Spring Lake, N. J.

Son Is Born.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert R. Stratford are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son yesterday at Garfield Hospital. Mrs. Stratford, before her marriage last year, was Miss Margo Wyeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan C. Wyeth, of Washington.

Parties Listed For Boat Races

Several Notables to Entertain at 10th Annual Regatta for President's Cup.

Already plans are in the making for the tenth annual President's Cup Regatta September 25, 26 and 27. Though not very old, it is rapidly gaining in popularity. The regatta was first sponsored by the late President Coolidge, who always attended the races, as did President Hoover.

President Roosevelt, who is an ardent devotee of the water and its sports, has been unable to attend the gay meets on the Potomac because the dates were usually around September 21, his mother's birthday, when he, of course, would be out of town and at Hyde Park for the family celebration.

The program includes not only the highly interestng motorboat races, but also races for all types of sailboats and the beautiful illuminated night pageant.

Among the prominent people who will entertain parties in their boxes along the river's edge will be Mr. and Mrs. John A. Remon, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Councilor, Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Baltz, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ellis Lodge, Mr. and Mrs. Harry P. Somerville, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Rust, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Christian Heurich, sr., Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Boothby, Mr. E. M. Seven Salad Combinations Suggested For Lunch Menus of School Children Youth Must Be Fortified With Proper Foods of Filling Nature.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE opening of school next week will change the luncheon routine in many homes. The mother, for example, whose child returns home for luncheon must plan to have the noon meal ready promptly when the child arrives. The meal must be nourishing enough also carry the child through an afternoon of studies without a pang of hunger.

The mother whose child carries his luncheon to school faces a different problem. She is confronted with the task of preparing a box luncheon five days every week for the next nine months. This means that she must have a wealth of ideas at her fingertips, lest the box luncheon becomes monotonous and the child turns its contents into the school waste can.

Let's consider first the school luncheon served at home. September noons are still pretty warm for hot lunches, but it is important that these noon meals be filling. One of the most appetizing combination for warm weather noon lunches includes a filling whole meal salad, a hot or cold bread, milk or hot cocoa, and a fruit sauce or pudding dessert. A hot vegetable may be included.

Proteins Important.

The foundation for these salads include cold meat, cheese or eggs for the protein requirement, potatoes, peas, baked beans, macaroni, or lima beans for the starch requirement, and any crisp raw vegetables or fruit for the mineral, vitamin and bulk requirement. With the specific food essentials in mind, it is not difficult to prepare tempting hearty salads for the school child's lunch. Any of these foods that taste good together will make ideal salad combinations.

Follow the usual rules for making salads when preparing this type of salad suggested for the September luncheon. Be sure that all the ingredients are cut in uniform pieces of small size. Mix the ingredients just enough to blend, but never so much that the salad looks crushed. Add just enough dressing to the ingredients to make them moist.

Use a dressing that will best enhance the blend of flavors. Some salads are more appetizing if allowed to marinate in a small amount of French dressing while they chill. These may be served with additional dressing, if desired. Never permit a salad to be soggy. Serve the mixed on a bed of crisp greens attractively arranged on a large platter.

Served From Bowl.

These salads may be served from a large bowl by the hostess at the table. The following combinations are interesting and desirable ones for the school child's luncheon. They will also appeal to the adult.

1. Baked beans (drained) chopped celery, Vienna sausages or Frankfurters and sweet pickles dressed with mayonnaise served on lettuce.
2. Inch macaroni, cubed ham or corned beef, celery and stuffed olives and mayonnaise served on lettuce.
3. Peas, cheese (cubed) celery, and mayonnaise served in lettuce cups.
4. Potato cubes, hard cooked egg, cubed salami, radishes, mayonnaise, served on lettuce background with tomato wedge garnish.
5. Hard-cooked eggs, kidney beans, celery and pickled onion or sweet pickles mixed with cooked dressing and served in lettuce cups.
6. Cubed ham, celery and pineapple with cooked dressing or mayonnaise served on shredded cabbage or in cabbage leaves.
7. Cubed cooked veal with orange sections, toasted almonds and celery. The mixture may be marinated in French dressing while chilling. Before serving, drain and nest in lettuce. Serve with a spot of cooked salad dressing.

You will notice that many of the ingredients in the combinations suggested above are foods that might be left over from the previous day's dinner. Left-overs, also may be used in the mainstay of the school-box lunch—the sandwich. Chopped left-over meat, fish, fruit or vegetables properly seasoned will serve as desirable spreads for the lunch-box sandwich. The spreads, however, must never be too moist lest they soak the bread and ruin the texture and flavor of the sandwich. A generous buttering of each slice of bread will keep the moisture in the filling where it belongs.

The sandwich will provide in a smaller capacity the same food elements found in the salad combinations suggested for the home luncheon. The bread supplies starch, which gives energy, and the filling must be relied upon to contain protein, minerals, vitamins and bulk.

Variation and imagination will keep the sandwich the popular mainstay of the school-box luncheon. Variety can also be obtained by including such items as salads or puddings or stewed fruit or sauce in small screw-cap jars, hot cocoa, milk or hot soups in thermos jugs, fresh fruit, cookies, tarts or cake.

Different kinds of bread will help as much to keep the popularity of the school lunchbox sandwich alive as a variety of fancy fillings. Here are several types of quick breads that take but a few minutes to stir up. They should be prepared in the afternoon for use the following day in the school box lunch as they will slice more successfully when cold.

Cream cheese, plain or seasoned with chopped nuts, mayonnaise, candied orange peel or chopped raisins, or softened butter make ideal spreads for any of the following quick breads.

Banana Bran Nut Bread.

¼ cup shortening
½ cup sugar
1 egg, well beaten
1 cup whole bran
1½ cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon soda
½ cup chopped nut meats
1½ cups mashed bananas
2 tablespoons water
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream shortening and sugar well. Add egg and bran. Sift flour with baking powder, salt and soda. Mix nuts with flour and add alternately with mashed bananas to which the water has been added. Stir in vanilla. Pour into greased loaf tin. Let stand 30 minutes and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) one hour. Let cool before cutting. Yield, one loaf 8½ by 4½ inches.

Honey Sandwich Bread.

½ cup bran
1 cup graham flour
1 cup white flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 egg
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
1-3 cup honey
½ cup chopped walnuts

Mix and sift the dry ingredients together. Add the nuts, mix and add milk, honey and beaten egg. Beat thoroughly. Pour into a greased oblong bread pan and bake one hour in a moderately hot even (400 degrees Fahrenheit).

Post Staff Photo.

The novelty of carrying a school lunch will wear out after the first few weeks if mothers do not take special care in planning well-balanced luncheons that show originality and variety.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

The Handicap of Stuttering.

I am thankful that the stuttering comedian is gradually disappearing from the theater. I saw a professional at a performance on the old Keith circuit take off a stammering yokel. He had the audience convulsed with laughter and, of course, I laughed, too. Not until years later was the cruelty of the mimicry born in upon me. It was fun at the expense of something that amounted virtually to a deformity. We do not ridicule hunchbacks or children with clubbed feet, so why those with speech impediments?

It has been shown that stutterers are not abnormal persons at all. In fact, they are average or superior with respect to mental development. Some will manifest changes of personality and occasionally emotional upsets will be engendered by the disability. Nevertheless, it may be said that there is no clearly defined relationship between physical makeup and this particular defect, although, in rare cases, injuries, shock, or long-continued fevers may lead to increased nervousness. In such cases it is a symptom of lowered nerve vitality. On the other hand, the difficulty often produces important disturbances. For example, the heart action, breathing and muscle tone will be affected, depending upon the severity of the symptoms.

What to do is the question. So far it appears obvious that the health of the victim is important to the end that everything should be done to allay nervousness. The value of psychotherapy is emphasized, as it may be utilized to inculcate a feeling of indifference toward the disorder.

One of the best devices now advocated is that which teaches the sufferer to read or speak very slowly, much as the slow motion film portrays acton. Let him decide that he will not hestitate on the word and then pronounce it slowly. Sometimes a slow motion study of a stutterer's own case will solve the difficulty.

One-Dish Meal Features Post Recipe Contest

Meal-in-one-dish combinations that can be baked and served from the same casserole are becoming more popular each season. They are no longer relegated to the table on the maid's afternoon off, but are served in great splendor as the main culinary attraction for buffet luncheons and after theater parties.

So it is only natural that casserole dishes should be chosen as the theme of The Post recipe contest for next week. All Post food page readers are invited to submit their favorite casserole dishes—Spanish rice, baked lima beans with little pork sausages, etc.—to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post.

Cash awards will be offered for the five best recipes. The first prize is $5, the second prize $3, and the three remaining prizes $1 each.

Only recipes that are typed or neatly written in ink will be eligible for an award.

Be sure to mail your recipes in time to reach this office not later than next Saturday morning.

New Zipper Bags Used as Bread Box

Latest Gadget for Household Can Be Scoured.

An interesting household gadget is the new zipper bag made of the finest oil and bakelite impregnated silk. The material is a soft, smooth fabric that will not stick, crack or harden, and because it can be washed, scoured, dry cleaned and even boiled, to keep it spotlessly clean and fresh it is especially popular as a refrigerator bag for vegetables, cheese, fruit and fish.

These bags which are made in four sizes ranging from 5½ by 3½ inches to 12 by 12 inches are waterproof, odorless, acid-proof, stainproof, mildew proof and are unaffected by heat, cold, grease, or oil.

In many homes the largest size bag is taking the place of the bread box for it keeps the bread fresh and is much easier to clean than a box. The bags make excellent school lunch containers and children like them better than the usual box because the bag can be folded and carried home in the pocket.

These new bags have unlimited household uses that reach far beyond the kitchen. Men find, for example, that the smallest size bag makes an excellent humidor for smoking tobacco, cigarettes or cigars.

September Calls for a Marshmallow Toast

A marshmallow toast adds the perfect finale to an outdoor picnic. This fluffy confection makes a delicious picnic dessert for children as well as adults, and the glowing coals of a dying fire provide the ideal heat for toasting marshmallows to a tempting, golden brown.

Ground Beef Balls and Kabobs Ideal for Cool Weather Picnics

Cheese Bobs and Baked Potatoes Also Happy Additions for Fall Outings; Salad Hint Is Offered.

THE END OF SUMMER does not mean that the curtain has been drawn down on the picnic season. It does mean the death of the picnic basket full of kitchen-made sandwiches, salads and cake, however, for now that the evenings are cooler it will be fun to actually cook supper around a blazing fire in the open. So what will you take to eat?

First you will want to think about the main course. And somehow the main course for this type of picnic always means meat grilled over an open fire. Ground beef balls may be toasted over the fire from the end of a two-pronged fork. Spread them with mustard and clamp them with slices of Bermuda onion between soft buttered buns.

Kabobs are good, too. For four persons you will need one pound of steak, cut in 12 pieces, 12 slices of bacon, 12 stuffed or seeded ripe olives, and 4 Bermuda onions. When you reach the camping site, gather branches 2 feet long, sharpen the small ends, and stick each with a piece of steak, a slice of onion, and a slice of bacon wrapped around an olive; repeat until about 6 inches of the stick is filled. A square of onion at the end of each kabob will protect the other food from the fire and will make its position more secure on the stick.

Small boneless pieces of lamb and slices of tomato can be substituted for the beef and bacon wrapped olives, if you prefer. Eat the kabobs direct from the sticks or slide them off the sticks into finger-length rolls, toasted and buttered.

Cheese bobs are especially nice for small children to make because they are quite simple to handle. Blocks of fairly soft American cheese are speared on long sticks, wrapped in bacon, and held over the coals until the bacon is done. Soft buns, toasted, make the best wrapper for this combination. A head of lettuce in a dampened paper or cloth sugar bag wrapped in waxed paper can be taken along to complete the sandwich.

If you want a salad, prepare a moist but not runny cole slaw, and wrap each serving in a cabbage leaf. Carry these individual salads in a wide-necked jar.

Baked potatoes are also a happy addition to a September picnic. Select fairly large ones. Encase in wet mud or wet clay, and then toss into the glowing coals. When baked knock off the wet mud coating. You can also bake potatoes by wrapping them in a thick layer of wet leaves or wet papers and burying them in a hole covered with dirt, the coals on top. Allow approximately one hour for either method.

A thermos bottle will keep coffee or cocoa warm if you plan to be gone for just one meal. If you plan to prepare your coffee over the camp fire, however, be sure to rub the bottom of the pot outside with soap before you put it over the fire. This will make it easier to clean.

When the main course has been eaten, and the embers of the fire are red and glowing, bring out a large package of soft, fluffy marshmallows and toast them from the end of a forked stick or two-pronged fork. Fresh fruit and toasted marshmallows make the perfect dessert for a September picnic.

Street Tweed Suit Has Longer Jacket

Paris (U.P.).—The conventional street suit of tweed is made this year with a longer jacket that is nipped in at the waist and then flares out in a basque. For country or sports wear, the more classic suit lines are used, with many three-quarter or full-length top coats shown over full or divided skirts. One house goes further and makes a bloomer dress of tweed. The dress is cut on severe, tailored lines, high at the neck and with long sleeves. Instead of a skirt, the dress ends in well-cut bloomers, which come several inches below the knees. A seven-eighths sport coat of matching tweed completes the bloomer costume.

Sausages, Beans Ideal This Month

For September you will find the simple, savory combination of small sausages, kidney beans and ripe olives a grand standby for hikes, which end around the glow of a campfire, or strenuous evenings about town which finish up in somebody's kitchen for restocking purposes.

Fry small sausages until brown and tender. Put aside in a hot pan in the oven. Fry well-seasoned kidney beans in whatever quantity is needed to a golden brown in the juice and fat of the sausages. The home boiled bean is preferable, but the canned variety may be substituted. Add from one-half to a cup of sliced ripe olives to the kidney beans sufficiently long to heat thoroughly. Serve with beans and ripe olives covering the sausages, or center the beans on a parsley garnished platter, ringed with ripe olives and the fragrant sausage. This is an authentic Spanish recipe.

Easy Ways of Dieting

"I'm just naturally fat—diet doesn't have a thing to do with it!" moans Mrs. Hefty to herself as she compares her luncheon with Mrs. Slimmer's.

On Mrs. Slimmer's tray is a well chosen luncheon adding up to only 255 calories. It is:

1 cup chopped spinach
1 yolk of hard-poached egg
Salad of two canned peach halves
3 tablespoons cottage cheese
4 large lettuce leaves
Mineral oil French dressing
3 saltines

Now let's see what Mrs. Hefty has chosen, which she says is "exactly the same menu." She has spinach with a whole egg. A roll and butter instead of crackers. Cream cheese in peach halves instead of cottage cheese. Mayonnaise instead of mineral oil French dressing. Also, macaroons and milk. It all adds up to 920 calories. When reducing she should have only 1,200 per day.

"But I've always heard that spinach and salads reduce you," says Mrs. Hefty. Let's not be childish. What you eat does not reduce you. What you don't eat reduces you.

Experts Study Future; Show Style Edicts

Winter Clothes Selected for Correctness, Durability.

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Fashion circles today were echoing with discussions of the fashion leaders' style dictums as revealed at the Fashion Futures Show. The fashions shown were selected by a group of fashion leaders from all the fall collections here and abroad. They represent the fashion indorsements for this fall and winter on the part of the Fashion Group whose membership includes the leading women fashion authorities of the country, which will lead the mode for months to come.

The clothes displayed were chosen for their quality, wearability, fashion significance and correctness for winter wear. The Fashion Futures display established the following style facts for the coming season:

Suits are important, also dressy afternoon frocks and luxurious evening gowns.

The silhouette is broadshouldered, with trim waist and swinging slim full skirt.

Black is the dominant color followed by beiges, rusts blues and "danger red."

Evening costumes are inspired by the coronation of King Edward VIII.

Bordered trims are important and lavish, frequently of fur.

Jeweled stars and flowers will accent coiffures.

A feature of the show was a "perfect wardrobe." This included the following:

Brown and beige checked wool country suit with a culotte skirt.

A black broadcloth Schiaparelli coat with black fringe trim worn over a slim black dress.

A silver lame street-length cocktail dress accompanied by a short swagger mink coat and toque.

A white moire evening gown.

Correct styles in makeup for the coming season also were "indorsed" by the fashion group in the show. These showed a trend toward naturalness with vivid lip rouge and with eye shadow matching the color of the eyes. Coiffures were curled close to the head. A few had bangs.

Even though winter is not yet around the corner, the style show gave a good idea of how women will appear on the beaches next summer.

Play clothes for the winter season on the Riviera are a good indication of what beach styles will be at Atlantic City next July. The costumes shown here introduce several new trends.

One of these is the gypsy influence. Beach dresses for the fashionable winter playgrounds, which, incidentally, seem as figure-concealing as some of the 1880 bathing suits, are flamboyant in their striped colorings and suggestive in their lines of the apparel of Romany belles.

The back-to-the-farm influence also was apparent in the beach attire, some of the beach coats being reminiscent of Mother Hubbard dresses in the days when gay calicoes with fast colors could be bought at the cross-roads stores.

The bathing suits and coats showed dressmakers touches, some being quite frilly. Bright colors predominated in stripes, plaids, checks and printed designs. The emphasis on beach coats and dresses indicated that the coming season will have plenty of bathers and suntanners who won't go "too near the water."

Vivid Colors Break Black Paris Gowns

Greens FormBackboneFlush of Fall Showings.

Paris (AP).—Color was painted into the fall style picture with a lavish hand when designers displayed new 1936-37 fashions here.

Interspersed with the ever chic and convenient black, which covered the largest section of the color palette, were flashes of deep reds, dark greens like burnt out emeralds, Egyptian clay tones in rust and brick, purples, browns with copper inflections, and a gamut of blues.

The deep reds were wine shades. The ordinary Bordeaux and Burgundy were passed up in favor of "vintage" reds, such reds flourished in plain fabrics, ran through checks and plaids, and flecked their way through tweed mixtures. They cast a spell, too, over many a dark brown wool or silk cloque, to give it a purplish tinge.

Brick and rust shades cut a wide swath throughout the scale, running down to russets and on to copper browns. Lanvin launched a light brick tone called Soudan red. This high-lighted her whole collection and made a sensation in dyed fox used for stunning big collars.

Greens were the backbone color of the collections. Grayed greens registered marked chic whether in lighter or darker tones, especially in slightly mixed or hairy wools.

Play Clothes Show Gypsy and Back-to-the-Farm Influences

Gay and flamboyant beach attire is forecast in the new winter play clothes shown at the recent Fashion Futures style show in New York. At left is a group ready to bask in winter sunshine—real or simulated. The black and white printed linen beach coat has a striking leaf motif. With it is worn a glass hat paint trimmed and designed to shade the face while admitting ultra violet rays to the wearer's complexion. The smart white princess beach coat is worn over a cotton bathing suit which repeats the lining. The short play dress displays the all-around pleated skirt. It is worn over a cotton bathing suit.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Sept. 11.

THE PROBLEM of Gotham career women and their young is one which I often ponder, as life's thorny pathway constantly leads me among feminine workers who try to combine big business and the home. It's a good but difficult trick if they can do it, and my investigations prove that most of them can.

ALICE HUGHES.

There's Mrs. Jeannette Moser, for instance—one of the town's most active and able advertising women. Jeannette loves her work, but she loves her 7-year-old son much more. Mothers now pick schools with more care than they do hats. A year ago Mrs. Moser's boy turned up the astonishing intelligence quotient of 160. Recently she had him measured again and found that it had skidded to 140. Her educational adviser recommended a school in suburban Bronxville as just the spot for Master Moser—so the mother tore up her town apartment and moved her son, her Lares and her Penates way out there, where this busy woman will now become a commuter. But Jeannette says she doesn't mind a jait too—as long as it's good for the boy. And her case is pretty typical of the way the big business women here feel and behave.

Dashing up to Saratoga for the last day of the recent race meet, and feeling pretty hopeless after the running of the Hopeful Stake, I felt that evening that I was sitting in a Roman night club about 24 hours before its fall. Never in my life did I see such a pagan display of precious stones. One needed smoked glasses to sit around Piping Rock for a few hours.

While I was sitting there blinking, good old Sophie Tucker, who was featuring the entertainment, announced on the loudspeaker that someone present had reported the loss of a small round diamond brooch, whereupon all the top hats, male and female, just yawned and looked bored. That crowd wouldn't bother to stoop and pick up a small, round diamond brooch! If Saratoga was any guide post, the reports I've been hearing and printing that we're in for a gem-incrusted season are going to be made good. Clap hands, jewelers!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—News reaches me of the decorative work being done on Edward VIII's apartment in Buckingham Palace by Lady Mendl, the American-born Elsie de Wolfe—much to the unhappiness of the Queen mother, who feels that Britain has plenty of fine decorators able to cope with any situation at "Buck House." My informant tells me that the royal couch will have pink crepe de chine bed sheets and pillowcases, with "Edward VIII" and a small crown embroidered in one corner . . . The English royal family is now wearing navy blue, by the way, as half mourning. So, I learn, is Mrs. Ernest Simpson, late of Baltimore . . .

Fall is further heralded here by the opening of the new show at our astounding French Casino—once the Earl Carroll Theater and now our most successful night spot, and a sight not to be missed by anyone within reach. A feature of the colorful new entertainment is a quintet of beautiful show girls, each towering 6 feet 2. Needless to say, there are no wise cracks from the audience!

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"IT WOULDN'T be so bad if I just had my own children tearing up the place, but we have all the neighborhood children as well," sighed the mother of three high school boys. "Of course I'm really glad they do make our place a hangout because then I know where the boys are and what they're doing. Even if it does keep things in a turmoil.

"Their father has recently had a lot of waste space in the basement remodeled, though, and it's now a gym for the boys and a sort of clubroom. They have various types of exercise bars, a punching bag, wrestling mat, ping-pong table and the rest of it.

"I've kept the furnishings and decorations the simplest possible because of course any extras would just get in the way of the good times. The walls are painted light gray, the cement floor is painted bright red and the curtains are of red flannel and the woodwork and bench pads are in bright blue (we've got benches built around the walls). The boys themselves decided they'd like a gas plate and a skillet, a couple of saucepans and some dishes so that they could cook down here when they took a notion. This part of the room is fixed with red oilcloth with a gray painted table and set of shelves.

"As you can imagine, this is the most popular spot in the neighborhood! You should count the bicycles that are parked in my back yard all the time. And the forgotten skates and school books that are left around our house every afternoon. Well, our boys enjoy it, and that's the main thing."

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Wife Who Tolerated Husband's Shortcomings for 10 Years Now Wants Divorce; She's Met Another Man.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a married woman 27 years old and have been married 10 years. All these years I knew my husband was not true to me and did not love me as he should, but I loved him and so I stuck to him. There have been times when I was heartbroken, when I knew for a fact he was two-timing me, but it blew over some way and so I stayed with him. Then two years ago he lost a good job on account of whisky and has gone from bad to worse since then. Now he is an habitual drunkard and we barely make enough to live on.

• • • • •

We have a little boy of 4 and a girl, 2. He thinks the world of them, but in such a strange way the children don't take to him like most children do to their father. He has always been inclined to pick at them and tease them, which frets them very much. The only way he can get one of them to sit on his lap is to offer candy or money.

• • • •

No other man has ever appealed to me in all these years until this past summer. This man has been a boarder here in the home of my mother-in-law for about a year and a half. I have had a great admiration for him for a long time, but, owing to the fact I am married, I tried to put all thoughts of him out of my mind. Then I learned that he admired me, too, and different little actions and the like told me he had a deep affection for me. Still I said nothing and went on.

• • • •

Within a few days I am going on a vacation to see my mother. He told me he would like to talk to me before I left. And so he told me that he loves me and wants me. I am fully convinced that he does, because no man could talk as earnestly and sincerely as he did if he did not mean it. By the way, he has been married, too, but got the wrong kind of wife.

• • • •

I know now that I love him, too, and I don't see how I can give him up. The only thing that holds me back is the children. He says he can love them as I do and is willing to take them if I love them and want them. I cannot bear to think of being separated from even one of them. Everything that has ever been done for them has been done by me and their grandmother.

• • • •

While I know my husband has not been true, I haven't complete proof of it. I do not believe he is interested in any other woman at the present time, but his sole interest is in a bottle of whisky. His only friends are sots. I only know that every spark of love I ever had has vanished and I can never love him again. I cannot give the other man up and still I know that we can't go on like this.

Give me your advice this week if possible. I shall be gone next week. WAITING.

Things to Remember.

DEAR WAITING: To begin with, your husband's alleged infidelities, even if proved, do not constitute grounds for divorce, inasmuch as you condoned them by continuing to live with him. His habitual drunkenness may, in the eyes of the law, entitle you to a divorce and complete custody of the children. But if you plan to institute action for divorce, you must be doubly careful about your own conduct. You are treading on dangerous ground in listening to another man's lovemaking, should your husband choose to be ugly and stubborn about giving your freedom.

• • • • •

One can only plan so far ahead in a case of this kind, and no further. Future developments must, in a measure, take care of themselves. As I see it, you must leave the other man and the possibility of a second marriage out of the picture altogether for the present. Make up your mind whether or not you are prepared to go on with your marriage. If you are determined not to go on with it, then take steps to secure a divorce. Get a lawyer's advice on how to protect your rights to the children. Make some sensible arrangements for their support and your own, which entail no revenue from your husband's family. If you expect to be awarded custody of the children, you will have to prove yourself a responsible, trustworthy parent—capable of providing their material, social and moral needs.

• • • •

If your family cannot support you and the children while you are waiting for a divorce, or if you cannot assume that burden yourself, then it is probable you are not in a position to demand your freedom. I don't believe the other man can obtain it for you.

• • • •

Keep the issue one between your husband and yourself. It would probably be best for all concerned if your mother-in-law's boarder went some place else to live until the whole thing has been settled.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

More Home Restraint for U. S. Prescribed by Titled Visitor

Baroness Monica de Gasser, From Finland, Gives Views on Americans During Call in Washington, But Hesitates to Be Emphatic.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

AMERICAN WIVES and mothers are wage earners, club workers or social butterflies with definitely extra-domestic interests and activities. American children are free to do as they please, and they grow up with very little parental restraint. American homes are merely places where members of the family eat and sleep, and family life as Europe knows it is rapidly disappearing in this country.

These views were voiced yesterday at the Dodge Hotel by slender, soft-voiced Baroness Monica de Gasser, of Finland, who has been in the United States for four months, but came to Washington for the first time this week.

In her opinion America could do with a little more home life, "yet I can't say your country has yet been spoiled by lack of it," she said, in flawless English. "I find your women full of vitality, attractive and interesting. I am delighted with the modern American girl. She is so natural, so charming and so well aware of her freedom. In no way is she handicapped by custom, tradition and dreadfully antiquated ideas that still circumscribe girls in Finland and in most old-world countries."

Men Complimented.

Equally complimentary in her comments on American men, the baroness pointed out that "what seems to be inborn courtesy in American men has no counterpart in men of my own country." Finnish women have long been burdened with tasks that were too hard for them because their men expect too much of them, she said.

"Yes, our women have the privilege of working side by side with men in public life," she went on. "We have women in virtually every profession and business. We have women bus drivers, conductors, timber workers and street sweepers. From the standpoint of women's right, the feminine Finn has everything she wants, but in far too many cases her work is too hard."

Every girl in Finland is trained for some type of activity, according to Baroness de Gasser, "so that if necessary she can support herself and help replenish the family purse. Yet even in households where wives are employed, family life is kept intact."

She mentioned, however, that many wage-earning homemakers are being relieved of household drudgery through the co-operative system. Apartments managed by this plan have central kitchens where meals are ordered each morning, and are sent up to each family at meal time. She believes this arrangement is finding favor with many families although she herself has not observed its workings closely.

Friend of Animals.

Her principal interest at the present is the protection of animals, she said, and her visit to America is being made in the interest of studying progress along this line here. From what she has observed so far, however, she wonders if Americans are as humane as they are supposed to be in their treatment of animals. She said she has been "amazed at the attitude toward dogs in this country." She brought two bird dogs and a Pomeranian with her from Finland, and she has experienced great difficulty in having them properly cared for since arrival. "Buses will not transport them; hotel managers will not admit them; boarding-house keepers will not hear of taking them in. And most of the kennels I have seen so far are terrible—not that I have visited any in Washington," she added. "You have no idea how difficult it is for a visitor with pets to get along over here."

The daughter of a diplomat and the wife of a widely known civil engineer, Baroness de Glasser has lived in many countries, but she has never seen such wholesale resentment toward dogs as in this country, she said.

Since she is vitally interested in the welfare of animals, she, like all antivivisectionists, is very much opposed to the dissection of, or the operation on, a living animal for physiological investigation, "unless such measures are performed by a scientist whose findings may prolong human life," she added. "What I object to most is the practice of medical-student operation on animals, when the findings can benefit nobody," she explained. "In Finland, we have passed laws limiting this. In America, I believe you still have a long way to go, even though humane societies here are working toward this end. The time will come, however, when senseless, horrible experimentation on animals will cease in all civilized countries."

Robert's Rules

Quite a number of District delegates to the A. F. G. E. convention in Detroit have packed away copies of "Robert's Rules of Order" in their suitcases.

This little volume on parliamentary procedure is a handy book to have around when the going gets rough, as anyone who has ever attended a meeting of the District Department knows.

For weeks now delegates have been studying the book, trying to figure out what parliamentary tricks may be used at the convention by the different factions. The conservatives, being in control of the organization and more experienced in the ways of conventions, are the better parliamentarians, but from the eager zeal with which "progressives" have been poring over Robert's rules, new parliamentarians may flourish at the convention.

With all the delegates well on their way to Detroit, it might be appropriate to list a few things that A. F. G. E. members at home might look out for.

First, watch Babcock. Although "Babs" has requested the convention to accept his resignation and will not be a candidate for re-election, he still has a couple of tricks up his sleeve.

Second, some colored delegates are planning to caucus to bring a joint resolution before the convention indorsing the Wagner-Costigan antilynching bill and condemning the activities of the Black Legion. Will that gathering turn into a "Stop Stengle" caucus?

Third, watch the numerous test votes that will occur at the outset of the convention. Upon the outcome of those "tests" will depend whether or not the conservative leaders will attempt to oust the so-called "New Deal" lodges.

Fourth, look for a horse trade by which progressives and liberals will swing their support to some anti-Stengle conservative in the field.

Fifth, follow the battle that is to be made by the conservative leaders to "steam roller" the convention and by other delegates to "open things up." Rump sessions are not improbable.

The Rolling Field Lodge has decided not to send a delegate or proxy to the convention.

Safe Jobs

Safest of the major Government agencies to work for apparently are the State and Labor Departments and most dangerous the War and Navy Departments, according to accident statistics of Federal agencies compiled by the United States Compensation Commission.

Both State and Labor Departments suffered no fatalities during the month of July while the War Department had seven deaths and the Navy five. The Treasury and Interior lost three employes each, the Department of Justice and Postoffice Department one apiece, Agriculture and Commerce, two.

The largest number of non-fatal injuries was in the Postoffice where 810 employes were hurt. Agencies that had no injuries or deaths were the Compensation Commission, Civil Service, Botanical Gardens, Federal Reserve Board, SEC, Tariff, Federal Trade Commission, Railroad Administration, Alien Property, Federal Power, Fine Arts, Columbia Institute for the Deaf, Social Security Board.

Of the 50 employes killed during July, 21 died by being struck by or crushed under vehicles, 17 through drowning, four from falls, one each from cave-ins, explosives, flying objects, strain and intoxication, and three from "horseplay and violence."

The September issue of the Resettlement Press was brought into our office late Thursday night while we were working like mad to clear our desk before going off to the A. F. G. E. convention. Still the issue looked so good we took time out to read it through. It was worth it.

Resettlement Play

The newly organized Resettlement Administration drama group has gone to the WPA Federal Theater Project for its first play.

The play, which is to be presented October 15 in the Agriculture auditorium, is "The Class of '29," by Orrie Lashin and Marlo Hastings, and deals with the problems faced by the generation of youths who graduated from college during the depression.

Rehearsals for the production start Monday night on the seventh floor of the Adams Building. Alexander Knowlton, who played stock in Chicago and Minneapolis and California, is the director.

Two other plays are to be presented, according to Maxine Mitchell, the group's president. The plays haven't been selected yet, but the dates are February 17 and April 15.

The Presidential election will be discussed by Paul Ward, Washington correspondent, at a meeting of the City College Club, of Government employes, tomorrow night at the Jewish Community Center . . . Birthday greetings to Hyman Farber, Louis George, Charles E. Greenberg and Charlotte A. McCulloch, of the Adjutant General's Office, of the War Department . . . Birchard E. Justice Lodge Awaits Ouster At Detroit Rally

Unit Pleads Defense After Reinstatement at Detroit Session.

By Samuel Lubell.

A Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 11.—A second suspension of Justice Lodge No. 21 by the National Executive Council of the American Federation of Government employes was expected tomorrow following the lifting of the previous suspension ban by the council today.

The decision to restore Justice Lodge to good standing was announced prior to a formal hearing granted lodge representatives and was made in accordance with a court agreement arrived at several weeks ago by Justice Lodge officers and five Washington members of the executive council.

In their injunction suit the Justice Lodge charged the council with violating the A. F. G. E. constitution in suspending the unit without a hearing. Rescinding of the suspension and formal hearing were interpreted by Justice Lodge representatives as merely "going through the legal motions" prior to the voting of a second suspension, leaving final decision on the matter with the national convention opening here Monday.

Defense Pleaders.

The lodge defense, which took two and a half hours to present, was made by Bennet Mead, an employe of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, Isidore Weisberg, now with the Social Security Board but formerly employed in the fingerprint section of the Department of Justice, and Howard Westwood, the lodge's attorney.

Warned by the Department of Justice not to "attack any division or bureau of the department," Mead, it was learned, studiously avoided personal criticism of Attorney General Cummings or J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and whose dismissal of eight fingerprint employes allegedly because of union activities prompted the lodge's protest. Hoover has maintained the employes were discharged because of inefficiency.

Although admitting that the council members gave them ample time to present their case, lodge representatives after the hearing complained that the questioning was conducted as if the lodge had to prove its innocence and not the council the lodge's guilt.

The questioning, which was conducted almost entirely by National Treasurer Cecil E. Custer, centered around three "violations" of the federation constitution:

Picketing Cited.

That the lodge had picketed the office of the Attorney General.

That the activities against which they had been warned by National Treasurer Custer were caculated to have an adverse effect on the legislative program of the federation.

That the lodge had distributed publications without the consent of the executive council, and had engaged in public controversies and sponsored mass meetings designed to bring the federation into disrepute and to embarrass the Government.

Lodge representatives denied they had picketed the Department of Justice, contending they had merely distributed protest handbills.

Copies of the handbills were offered in evidence.

The charge of "unauthorized publicity" was defended on the ground that the suspension of the lodge by the council was unconstitutional and that the lodge had no alternative save public appeal in fighting that suspension.

Beer, Hot Dogs Feature Toasts To Heurich for 94th Birthday

Veteran Brewmaster Claims It's 95th Anniversary, Because 'You Have to Count Day I Was Born;' Still Gets to Work at 8 A. M. Daily.

Christian Heurich, at 94, is every inch the brewmaster he set out to be as a lad in Germany 79 years ago. Heurich's employes at the brewery celebrated his ninety-fourth birthday yesterday. They presented him with a silver vase and a bouquet. Then they toasted their aged employer with beer and downed hot dogs while he went the rounds, shaking hands with each man.

Although the birthday was celebrated at the brewery yesterday it actually doesn't take place until today. And it isn't his ninety-fourth birthday, it's his ninety-fifth, Heurich insists.

"You have to count the day I was born as a birthday," he declared, "otherwise I wouldn't be here. I'm 94 years old, but this is my ninety-fifth birthday. That's only logical."

Despite his years, Heurich still appears at work promptly at 8 o'clock every morning. His continued good health he ascribes to "moderation in everything."

"I drink a glass of beer when I feel like it," he said, "but I always drink moderately. I believe in moderation in everything, even in love," he added, laughing.

Present-day mechanical methods, he believes, have tended to make brewing a science instead of the art that it was when he was young. No theoretical training, he maintains, can compensate for good practical experience.

As a young man, Heurich set out to get all the practical experience he could. Starting in the business at the age of 14, with a burning ambition to become a brewmaster, he worked first in Germany. Then he went to France and to Vienna to study other methods. He came to this country in 1866 and worked in many different cities before founding his brewery here in 1872.

Now, he says, he wishes the days before prohibition were back. He thinks that during the dry period people lost their taste for beer. "They can't tell good beer from middling, any more," he said regretfully.

P. U. C. to Rule Soon on Trolley Route Changes

Six Modifications Sought by Transit Company to Speed Service.

The Public Utilities Commission early next week is expected to act upon a rerouting schedule submitted yesterday by the Capital Transit Co. and based upon the track changes made within recent months and those nearing completion.

The new schedule involves six changed routes of street cars and is the outgrowth of intensive study by transit company engineers, in consultation with commission experts.

All cars on the Mount Pleasant line will again be routed down F street instead of F and G streets as of recent months.

A new line would be created to operate on Pennsylvania avenue from Potomac Park to Eighth and F streets northeast.

The Friendship Heights cars would be run to Seventeenth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, instead of to the Seventh street loop, as at present. The present one-man cars probably will be exchanged for the new streamlined models running between Seventeenth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast and Rosslyn. A speed-up in the Wisconsin avenue service is expected.

Rosslyn cars, under the proposed plan, will be distributed between Kenilworth and Fifteenth and H streets northeast, instead of being sent to Seventeenth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

Cabin John cars, which now go to Peace Monument, would turn off Fifteenth street onto G street at the Treasury and proceed to Rhode Island avenue and Mills avenue northeast.

North Capitol cars, now running to Potomac Park, would turn back at Nineteenth and F streets.

The rerouting is necessitated, E. D. Merrill, general manager of the company explained, by changed traffic conditions since the commission's original rerouting order was issued and by substitution of buses for street cars on Connecticut avenue.

Press Club, Guests Will Cruise Today

Members of the National Press Club and male guests, numbering about 1,000, will go on a "show boat" cruise down the Potomac this afternoon aboard the Wilson liner City of Washington.

President Roosevelt, the club's most distinguished member, plans to cruise the river at the same time. It is expected that the "show boat" will meet the President's yacht, and that courtesies will be exchanged.

Marvin H. McIntyre, secretary to the President, will appear as "The Kentucky Canary" in the press club minstrels. Other features will include the Joe Louis-Max Schmeling fight picture. Bill McCormick, Washington Post boxing expert, will tell the "inside story" of the fight as the picture is being shown. A 30-minute broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System network will precede the departure of the boat at 1:45 p. m.

Loves His Duck So He Can't Let It Go, So Case Is Dropped

Gabriel Di Giovanni rubbed his stomach with deep satisfaction in Police Court yesterday and told Judge Robert E. Mattingly he had eaten his pet rooster.

Di Giovanni said he ate the rooster after neighbors complained about violation of poultry laws for the District.

In addition to the rooster, Di Giovanni also had a duck.

Said Judge Mattingly:

"Since you can't keep the duck, why not give it to Joe Penner?"

Giovanni said:

"I love the duck too much. I can't do that."

Judge Mattingly replied:

"I hope the soul of the rooster rests in peace. Let the case of the duck be dismissed."

Crimes File Is Compiled By Hepbron

Officials Help Expert in Tracing Capital's Ancient Cases.

Public Support Sought in Association's Justice Drive.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A comprehensive picture of Washington's crime problem—backed by facts and figures—is appearing rapidly in files of the Washington Criminal Justice Association.

Under the supervision of James M. Hepbron, authority on crime and acting director of the group, an elaborate record system, tracing criminal cases from start to finish, is being prepared for ultimate use in reducing local crime through swift and certain administration of justice.

Working in co-operation with District officials, Hepbron and his assistants are searching police and court records, gathering data for ammunition in a relentless battle with lawlessness.

At the same time, Hepbron is enlisting public support of the movement by explaining the association and its functions before meetings of various civic and business groups. It is only through the support of public opinion, he pointed out, that justice may be administered effectively.

Will Check Records.

After his records are complete they will be checked against court and police files, Hepbron said, with a view toward uncovering possible errors and revealing the reason behind laxity and carelessness in the administration of justice.

Established in small quarters in a downtown office building, the crime expert and his chief assistant, Wallace Reidt, former member of the British intelligence forces, are building the criminal justice body to a permanent, fact-finding organization.

Searching back into musty police records, they are studying each crime from the time it is reported until final disposition. By this procedure Hepbron hopes to reveal all flaws in the Washington criminal picture and to act accordingly toward seeking a solution.

In his carefully planned attack on the problem, the crime association director is leaving no stones unturned. His analysis of the local crime situation is based on the following records:

Number of Crimes.

1. The number of reported crimes.
2. Unfounded or false reports.
3. Actual founded reports.
4. Number of arrests.
5. Number of cases disposed of in Juvenile Court, Police Court, the number of convictions in each, the number of dismissals in each.
6. The number of cases nolle prossed or marked "no papers" in Police Court.
7. Grand jury action—dismissal and indictments.
8. The number of guilty and not guilty pleas offered by suspects.
9. The number of cases pending trial.
10. The number of prisoners released on probation.

When this data is collected, it is filed for reference in offices of the Criminal Justice Association. From time to time, these records will be compared with other findings and a complete analysis made.

Hepbron's inquiry will include the four branches of Police Court, District Supreme Court, the United States attorney's office, the probation offices of both courts and all activities of the Police Department.

Efficiency Lacking.

During a similar task in Baltimore, where he has been director of the criminal justice commission since 1925, Hepbron uncovered facts showing how and where the law enforcement was lacking in efficiency.

Following early stages of his inquiry in the Maryland city, there were shifts in the police department and a general change in justice administration. This led to a decrease in crime and an increase in law enforcement efficiency and police morale. Fifty-two per cent of all criminal cases in Baltimore are now being solved by arrests and convictions.

Stressing the time element as important in the administration of justice, Hepbron pointed out that 90 per cent of these solved cases in Baltimore are now being tried and disposed of within three weeks.

300 Persons Attend Dedication Of Palisades Park Field House

C. Marshall Finnan, Director of System, Guest of Honor and Speaker; First Field Day at Center Will Be Held Today.

High above the Potomac River at Edmunds and Sherrier place northwest, the beautiful $40,000 Palisades Park field house was dedicated last night. Nearly 300 persons attended the dedication and inspected the colonial type structure that will serve as a recreation center for residents in the Conduit road section. C. Marshall Finnan, director of the National Capital Parks system, under whose jurisdiction the playground was built, was guest of honor and principal speaker. In his short talk, Director Finnan gave an outline of the building features and the cost of the structure.

The recreation center begun last year cost a total of $60,000. Besides the building the area contains 5½ acres, including a baseball diamond, tennis courts and a child's wading pool.

The field house is of old red brick one and a half stories high. It consists of a large auditorium, paneled chest high with oak, a moving projection room, model kitchen, cloak rooms and lavatories. Funds for construction came from Secretary of Interior Ickes' $1,000,000 park improvement program.

Charles E. S. Rich, president of the Conduit Road Citizens Association, made the introductory remarks and Clyde S. Bailey, chairman of the arrangements committee, acted as master of ceremonies. Invocation was given by the Rev. Oscar H. Randall, pastor of Potomac Heights Community Church.

Following the invocation the audience pledged allegiance to the flag. Colors were presented by Boy Scout Troop 61.

First field day at the new center will be held at 2 p. m. today with sports and games especially for the younger children. At 7 p. m. exhibitions will be given by Boy and Girl Scouts and a dancing class.

Jones, Fenwick Air Democratic Rally Dispute

Former Asks Recognition for Arlington Club; Retires From Race.

Roanoke, Va., Sept. 11 (AP).—Young Democrats of Virginia's nine Congressional districts met in separate caucus late today to name officers, choose candidates for State office and to decide their positions on important matters expected to go before the convention session tomorrow.

The meetings for the most part were harmonious and the business was handled expeditiously.

In the Eighth District, already the chief center of controversy because of a factional fight in the Loudoun County club, there was a brief airing of conflicting views over indorsement of John Paul Jones, of Arlington, for State president, which ended harmoniously.

Jones, saying he had withdrawn his name, pleaded for "recognition" of the Arlington club, which he said contained 516 fully paid-up members. He said he wanted to be assured of some support outside of his own club before running for State president and understood he would have such support from Charles Fenwick, who was elected permanent chairman of the State convention today.

Fenwick, speaking of the action of Falls Church in indorsing Harold F. Snead, of Henrico, at a meeting attended by Fenwick, said he told the members he was committed to Jones but that he didn't think it was the Eighth District's year. John Galleher, of the Eighth District, has been president five years.

Fenwick said he wanted to see the big Arlington club recognized and Jones thanked him and pledged full co-operation of the club to him. Both said they were glad the matter had been "aired."

Furrier Pays $500 For Safety Signs Carrying Name

Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal said yesterday Samuel D. Zlotnick, the furrier, had agreed to pay a $500 fine for having advertising signs painted on public sidewalks at downtown intersections.

The compromise was agreed upon after Seal threatened to prosecute him for each of 150 offenses against the police regulations.

The signs advised readers to "Cross Crossings Carefully" and were signed "Zlotnick the Furrier."

D. C. Women Arrests Rise 100% in 4 Yrs.

Anti-Saloon Figures Show Sharp Rise in Felony Cases.

Intoxication Gains Only at Population Rate in '36, Says Report.

The percentage of women arrested for committing felonies in the District during the fiscal year 1936 was more than double that in 1932, according to a report of the Anti-saloon League made public yesterday.

In 1932, women represented 3.5 per cent of the total arrests for felonies. In 1936, this figure had increased to 8 per cent, the report said.

In 1936, arrests for all causes increased 43.6 per cent over 1932. The population during the same period grew only 25.5 per cent.

Arrests for intoxication, however, increased at only the same rate as did population in 1936. During 1934 and 1935, arrests for this offense increased "tremendously" over 1932, when compared with the population increase, the league reported.

Cites Judge Mattingly.

Commenting on the recently announced intention of Judge Robert Mattingly to be more severe with those arrested for drunkenness, the league stated that "the imposition of heavier sentences will tend to keep 'repeaters' in jail for longer periods and thus reduce the number of times they are arrested during the year."

Other statistics compiled by the league follow:

Of 59 murders committed in the District in 1936, seven were charged to persons under 21 years old. Three of them were boys and four of them girls. Of the 12 manslaughters, one was charged to a boy under 17.

7,924 Disorderly Arrests.

Of the 7,924 arrests for disorderly conduct during 1936, 577 were of boys and 158 of girls under 21. "About one-fifth of the number of disorderly cases are of women and girls," the report said.

Arrests for intoxication numbered 19,126 during the year 1936. Of the total intoxication arrests, 249 were of young men under 21 and 44 of young women under that age. A total of 1,251 women were arrested for intoxication.

Out of a total of 398 arrests for driving while drunk, 13 were of youths under 21.

Pitts Parole Plea Action Postponed

The District Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole yesterday deferred a decision on the application of G. Bryan Pitts, former Washington mortgage banker, for a parole from the District Reformatory at Lorton after hearing his appeal.

Wilbur LaRoe, jr., chairman of the board, stated that the action was postponed because of the absence of Frank R. Jelleff, a member of the board. He said a ruling probably will be made at the next meeting of the board in about two weeks. The other member of the board is Dr. Emmett J. Scott.

Pitts, a former chairmna of the board of the F. H. Smith Co., is serving 14 years upon conviction of a conspiracy to embezzle. He entered the prison on March 9, 1932, and became eligible for parole on December 27, 1934.

Jacobs Defeats Stammers, 6-4, 6-3; Perry, Budge in Finals

English Girl Bows in 3d Meeting

California Miss at Top Form Despite Injury; Marble Foe Today.

Grant Is No Match for Briton; Budge Easily Erases Parker.

By the Associated Press.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 11.—Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, jr., the pint-sized tennis rebel, almost caught an indifferent Fred Perry off guard today, but finally lost to the Englishman, who gained the final of the United States singles tennis championship against California's Don Budge. Helen Jacobs fought her way to her fifth straight final and will defend her crown against Alice Marble tomorrow.

A crowd of 10,000, pulling for an upset similar to the one Bitsy cracked three years ago when he beat the defending champion, Ellsworth Vines, almost groaned its disappointment as the scrappy Southerner went down to a 6—4, 3—6, 7—5, 6—2 defeat. Perry, apparently in the mood for anything but a tennis match, loafed through the first three sets and finally went to work in the fourth, although at no time was he really going under a full head of steam.

Budge, showing at his best form since he returned from England last month, disposed of Frank Parker, of Spring Lake, N. J., in straight sets, 6—4, 6—3, 6—3. The Californian, after the first set, took things easy to be in tip-top shape for tomorrow's final.

Miss Marble Next.

Miss Jacobs had the dislocated thumb on her right hand tightly bandaged, but it didn't seem to give her any trouble. She turned in one of her finest performances in vanquishing the formidable southpaw, Kay Stammers, in straight sets, 6—4, 6—3. On her showing today and against Gussie Raegener yesterday in the quarter-finals, it seems unlikely Miss Jacobs will fail in her ambition to become the first player to win the championship five straight times.

The titleholder's next adversary, Miss Marble, of San Francisco, gained the championship round in a 6—1, 6—1 walkover victory over Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., in a match that for the most part was a comedy of errors. Miss Marble, making a comeback after a two-year retirement, flashed moments of brilliance in the second set, but there was nothing sustaining about her form against her steady driving opponent.

The final day's program of the championships will be opened at 10 a. m., with the veterans' final between defending Champion Raymond Bidwell, of Boston, against Henry H. Bassford, of Bronxville, N. Y. Miss Jacobs and Miss Marble will meet at 1 p. m., and Perry and Budge are scheduled to take the court at 2:30.

Finger May Bother Him.

Perry baffled everybody but Grant by his style of play against the tireless, retrieving southerner in the first three sets. As things turned out it appeared the Briton was trying to beat Grant at his own game of steady baseline play. But he found out this was dangerous business in view of the fact he was laboring under somewhat of a handicap. He split the third finger of his racquet hand in the first game while smashing a forehand drive.

Whether Perry can become the first foreigner to win the title three times depends on whether the finger will give him any bother. He favored it a bit against Grant. Although he still rules favorite to recapture the title he lost last year when he was beaten in the semi-finals by Wilmer Allison, Perry probably will have a difficult time conquering budge.

The red-headed Californian, practically at the top of his game, turned ina fine job of vanquishing Parker. He rated himself cautiously in the first set, let out a little in the second, and then turned on the heat in the third.

Miss Jacobs was in splendid control overhead and her ground strokes left little to be desired as she eliminated Miss Stammers, who had beaten her in the Wightman Cup matches at Wimbledon this year and here last year. Some experts said it was the finest match Miss Jacobs ever has played in this country.

Goodman and Campbell Rated U. S. Amateur Favorites at 8-1

By the United Press.

Garden City, Long Island, Sept. 11.—Jack Doyle, Broadway betting commissioner, came to this golfing layout today, looked over the field, and named Johnny Goodman and Albert (Scotty) Campbell as the men to beat in the fortieth National Amateur golf championship starting here on Monday.

Doyle tacked a price of 8 to 1 against the chances of these two stars succeeding to the title vacated when Lawson Little turned professional.

Doyle quoted a price of 10 to 1 against seven others. Listed at this price were Charley Yates, of Atlanta; Walter Emery, of Oklahoma City; Johnny Fischer, of Cincinnati; George Dunlap, of New York; Freddie Haas, of New Orleans; Reynolds Smith, of Dallas, and Ross Somerville, of London, Ont.

Despite the fact that there are 12 British players in the list of 210 entrants, Somerville is the only "foreigner" placed at or near the top of the betting list.

The lightness with which the foreign threat is regarded is reflected in the fact that of the 20 players listed as 15 to 1, only two are from overseas. They are Hector Thomson, British amateur titleholder, and Jock McLean.

Yanks Win, 14-4; Gehrig Hits 46th

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 11.—The New York Yankees today uncorked the murderous batting power that carried them to the American League pennant and pounded out a 14-to-4 victory over the dethroned Detroit Tigers.

The 15-hit assault featured a nine-run spree in the eighth inning, in which Lou Gehrig walked the first time up and hit his forty-sixth homer with two on base on his second trip to the plate in the same frame; George Selkirk, also up twice, singled and doubled; Jake Powell hit two singles, and Tony Lazzeri doubled and walked.

Selkirk also hit a homer with one on in the third. Pat Malone, who has been used mostly for relief roles this season, went the route for the Yanks, chalking up his eleventh victory of the year.

Little Adds 66, Holds Canada Open Lead

Paul Runyan Shoots 65, 3 Strokes Away; Par Routed by Many.

By the Associated Press.

Toronto, Sept. 11.—William Lawson Little, jr., of San Francisco, abdicated monarch of amateur golfdom, continued to sweep the professional field before him over the St. Andrews course today as he shot his second straight sub-par round in the Canadian Open championship.

On top of his record-smashing 67 for the opening round, the former British and United States amateur champion shot a 66 today to lead at the halfway mark with a total of 133.

Only one player appeared to be within striking distance of the Presidio pounder, barring a disastrous crackup on the final 36 holes tomorrow. Dapper Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., played an even more superb game than Little today, carding a 65 on top of yesterday's total to take second place at 137, three strokes under par.

Manero Seven Strokes Away.

Even with par, but still seven strokes behind the pacemaker, came Tony Manero, of Greensboro, N. C., the United States Open champion, with 69—71, and Jack Littler, of Ottawa, Canada's main hope, with a pair of 70s.

Par had no more chance against the sharpshooters today than it did in the opening round and even though the qualifying limit for tomorrow's round was set at the low figure of 151 strokes, hardly a "big name" player on the list failed to come through. In addition to Little and Runyan, Sam Parks, the United States Open titleholder from Pittsburgh, with 67; Johnny Revolta, of Evanston, Ill.; Robert Gray, Sandwich, Ontario, and Bill MacWilliams, Toronto, with 69s, were under par figures.

On the other hand, there were a couple of notable slips among the first-round leaders. Abe Espinosa, Chicago veteran, who had a 68 yesterday, tumbled to 77; Jimmy Thomson, slugging Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., pro skidded from 68 to 75, and Gordie Brydson, former hockey star from Port Credit, Ont., from 69 to 74.

Donovan Barely Qualifies.

Bud Donovan, of Winnipeg, who shared amateur honors yesterday with 74, barely qualified after carding a 77. But Fred Hoblitzel, of Lambton, Ontario, improved by two strokes on his 74 to lead the Simon Pures at 146.

Little's booming drives, often going 300 yards or more, made almost every hole look easy. He went out in 32 with three birdies and came home in 34 to take another stroke off par although he was over perfect figures on two holes. Only the failure of some of his long putts to drop kept the San Franciscan from turning in an even lower score.

Runyan's superb iron play and unbeatable putting gave him his record 65. So accurate were his chips to the greens that he had only 24 putts for the entire round, 11 on the first nine holes. He seldom drove more than 230 yards, but his approaches from anywhere within 50 yards were deadly.

"I don't think he sank a long putt all afternoon," said Arthur Hulbert, of Thornhill, who played with him.

Leo Walper, Bethesda, Md., professional, removed himself from title contention today when he added a 76 to his 75 of yesterday for a total of 151.

Chisox's 26 Hits Off Lisenbee Tie Mark, Beat A's

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 11.—The White Sox tied the modern major league record for hits off one pitcher this afternoon when they pounded out 26 hits off Horace Lisenbee to beat the Philadelphia Athletics, 17 to 2. Monty Stratton pitched a six-hit game. A ladies' day crowd of 14,000 saw the contest.

Garden City's Wind Balks Amateurs

Only Haas Breaks Par as Entries Practice; Ouimet, Fischer on Scene.

By the Associated Press.

Garden City, N. Y., Sept. 11.—The competitors in the National Amateur Golf Championship, which starts here Monday, had their first battle with Garden City's wind today, and the scores on the famed course began soaring.

Only Freddy Haas, New Orleans, the Canadian amateur champion, managed to break par. The lean, handsome Southerner went out in the morning before the wind had risen and reported a 72, one under par, but most of the others had their troubles.

Bud Ward, of Tacoma, Wash., scored two 73's, and Jack Munger, Dallas, playing with two cut fingers, also managed to score a 73. Chick Evans, Chicago, who holds the present competitive record of 71, arrived today and toured the course in 74, as did Jesse Guilford, Boston, the 1921 champion, and Jack McLean, the former Scottish amateur champion.

Ouimet, Fischer on Scene.

Francis Ouimet, Brookline, Mass., and Johnny Fischer, Cincinnati, arrived at the course for the first time today, but both played only a few holes.

After one trip around the course, many of the players took to the practice course and practiced hitting iron shots that died as they landed. The hard, fast greens are causing most of the players a great deal of trouble

Tournament officials said that the greens would be cut down fast when the 82 matches get under way in the first round Monday. No changes will be made in the tee markers except at the short holes all week.

Frank Belwood, the professional at the course, said he had instructions from the United States Golf Association officials to place the markers as far back on the back tees as possible and leave them there all week.

California Girls Enter Singles, Doubles Finals

Philadelphia, Sept. 11 (AP).—The national girls tennis championships became an "all-California" affair today with Pacific Coast stars advancing to both the singles and the doubles finals.

In the singles semifinals, Eleanor Dawson, of Piedmont, Calif., tumbled the top seeded favorite, Barbara Winslow, of Hollywood, 8—6, 6—4, while Margaret Osborne, of San Francisco, eliminated Hope Knowles, of Philadelphia, the last "Eastern hope" 7—5, 6—4.

In the doubles, Miss Winslow and Jane Stanton, of Los Angeles, beat Madge (Bunny) Harshaw, and Barbara Strobhar, both of Philadelphia, 6—0, 10—8, while Miss Osborne and Miss Dawson defeated Patricia Cumming, of Westfield, N. J., and Elena Ciccone, of Newton Center, Mass., 6—2, 6—1. The finals in both classes will be played tomorrow.

Nats Overcome Indians, 7 to 2, Regain 3d

Whitehill Yields 6 Hits as Galehouse Is Nicked for 5 Runs in 1st.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cleveland, Sept. 11.—The Nats came out of their corner swinging this afternoon, belted Dennis Galehouse out of the box, banged five runs across the plate in the first inning, won a 7-2 decision over the Indians and took undisputed title to third place.

It was an uproarious opening inning. Galehouse, apparently pitching basehits instead of baseballs, couldn't get anybody out. The first man out in the inning was, in fact, Galehouse himself, who was taken out of the game after the first six Nats to face him had showered the premises with three doubles and three singles.

Earl Whitehill saw to it that the Indians did not become obstreperous after that. The venerable southpaw turned in a masterful performance in limiting Cleveland to six hits—his third consecutive six-hit triumph and his twelfth win of the season.

With the left-handed Thornton Lee putting the brakes on the Nats' scoring from the first inning to the eighth, Whitehill protected Washington's lead in excellent style. He did give up a run in the fourth and another in the eighth, but after that fourth inning he surrendered only three hits to the Tribesmen.

Hogan Hits 2 Doubles.

The Nats' battery of Whitehill and Shanty Hogan was no drawback at the plate, either. Hogan banged a pair of doubles as his share of the Nats' eleven hits and Whitehill accounted for a pair of singles. They

Cox, Mackenzie Triumph, 2 and 1

An outgoing 33 by Wiffy Cox, Kenwood professional, enabled him and Roland MacKenzie, of Congressional, to defeat Cliff Spencer, of Beaver Dam, and Bob Barnett, of Chevy Chase, 2 and 1, yesterday over the latter's course.

Cox's 69, two strokes over his previous best performance at Chevy Chase, led the professionals. Barnett had a 71, MacKenzie a 72 and Spencer a 73.

The winning combination shot a best ball of 64 against the losers' 66 over tough par 69 layout. MacKenzie's long putts for birdie 2s on the fourth and thirteenth holes were contributing factors in the victory.

Legalized Bookmaking Urged By Grand Jury at Baltimore

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 11.—Licensing of race-bet bookmaking was recommended today in a special report filed by the May term grand jury.

The report, signed by 14 of the 23 members of the jury, proposed legalized bookmaking and lotteries as a source of additional revenue and to prevent further increase in tax rates.

The report stated, in part:

"Our tax rate was increased 16 cents over the 1935 rate, and it is expected that the 1937 rate will exceed that of 1936. Real estate bears the burden, and will continue to do so.

"If it is legal to bet at the tracks and thereby give the State a piece of the money, why not legalize bookmaking as is done in other civilized countries and get our just revenues and provide at the same time penalties so severe that violators will hesitate to cheat or defraud the State of its moneys?"

Cards Split 2, Fall 4 Games Behind

Beat Dodgers, 12-8 in 1st, but Drop Second, 5-4, to Mungo's Hurling.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, Sept. 11.—Van Lingle Mungo and his strikeout pitching sank the St. Louis Cardinals another half game back of the National League lead today by stopping them in the nightcap of a doubleheader with the Dodgers after the Gas House Gang had won the opener.

The split, coming while the pace-setting Giants, were winning their single start against the Cubs, dropped the Cards to four full games from first place.

Don Gutteridge, rookie third baseman, slammed out two homers and a triple to drive in five runs as the Cards won the first game, 12 to 8. Mungo's mates staked him to a one-run lead in the sixth inning, and that was enough to give him and the Brooklyns a 5-to-4 decision.

Procurement and Pepco Battle to 4-4 Tie in Post's Title Series

Federal Day Is Saved by Kramer

Outfielder Slams Homer to Deadlock; Sullivan Fans 11 Batters.

By John R. Vosburgh.

This refusal of teams in The Post Sandlot Association to accept defeat in the city weekday play-offs is becoming downright serious. Yesterday, for the second time in four days, a game was fought to no decision on the South Ellipse with Procurement Division and Potomac Electric Power Co. ending about where they started, in a 4-to-4 tie.

A rousing home run by Centerfielder Harry Kramer, far over Smitty Nau's head in centerfield, gave Procurement, champions of the Federal "AA" League, a draw after trailing 4 to 3 with two out in the eighth. The game will thus have to be replayed Tuesday.

The series will resume Monday on both the North and South Ellipse with Bureau of Investigation, champions of the United States Government League, playing the Department Store League winners, and National Savings, of the Bankers League, facing Accounts and Deposits of the Sports Center Government League.

Blasts Sullivan's Efforts.

Kramer's healthy sock yesterday blasted a brilliant performance by Lefty Joe Sullivan, of the Pepcos, who fanned 11 men and allowed but 8 hits. All other three runs but the homer made by Procurement were aided and abetted by gross misplay on the part of Sullivan's teammates. Howard Preston, Pepco pitcher, was nailed for 10 hits.

Pepco, National Capital League champions, got off to a 2-0 lead in the first inning when Buster Sprague bobbled a grounder by Wally Lee, Nau socked an infield hit off Third Baseman Eddie Miller's glove and Lefty Deck drove a Texas Leaguer to right center scoring Lee and Nau as Sprague's relay went wild.

Procurement Ties Score.

Procurement scored in the third when "Tut" Tortorice singled, took second when Second Baseman Robbins dropped a toss from Chaconas at short on Hirst's grounder, and then scored on Kramer's single. The Governmet tied the count in the fourth when "Horse" Colliflower singled with one out, stole second and drew a wild throw from Catcher Tubby Auth by stealing third, scoring on the play.

A double by Sullivan and a looper over second by Chaconas paved the way for two Pepco runs in the fourth but Procurement came back to tie the count when Harold Hirst scored on a long smash to deep left which bounded out of Lee's hands for an error.

Then along came Kramer with his homer in the next frame and the teams fought it on even terms in the last inning with no serious scoring threat materializing.

Harold Hirst, of the Procurement Division team, pictured in an ill-starred attempt to race from first to third on Kramer's single to center in the third inning yesterday on the Ellipse. Third Baseman "Gump" Bailey, of Pepco, put the ball on Hirst and held it despite taking a spill. The two teams played to a 4-4 tie.

Eppley Named Athletic Head At Md. U.

The appointment of Geary (Swede) Eppley, associate professor in agronomy and chairman of the student life committee, as director of athletics at the University of Maryland, was announced yesterday, thereby relieving H. C. Byrd, president of the institution, of all official connection with sports.

Lyman McAboy's appointment as head coach of the varsity boxing team was announced simultaneously. School authorities previously had announced that McAboy would coach the ringmen until an older man could be obtained for the position, when the District boy would be relegated to the role of assistant.

Eppley's selection was made last spring but the announcement was withheld pending the settlement of minor differences of several members of the athletic staff. Frank Dobson, head football coach, applied for the position but, when refused it, agreed to accept his present berth. Jack Faber, who, technically was head coach, graciously stepped down to make way for Dobson and to preserve harmony.

Eppley is not new to sports, having coached the Terrapin track teams since 1924 and enjoying better than average success with his men. He developed Earl Widmyer, greatest sprinter in the school's history, Coleman Headley, middle-distance runner, and a 1-mile medley relay team which established a record at the Penn Relays two years ago.

Graduated with the clas of 1920 Eppley returned to teach at his alma mater in 1927. He has been active in student affairs since, serving as financial adviser to various student organizations in addition to handling the assignments noted above.

Keating, Barabas Are Injured In Spirited Hoya Scrimmage

The dreaded shadow of injuries cast its shadow over the Hilltop yesterday, where Coach Jack Hagerty is grooming the 1936 edition of Georgetown's football team for the approaching season. Tom Keating, regular quarterback, and Tony Barabas, shifted from end to a halfback post only this week, were the victims.

Keating, who wrenched his ankle, will be out for the remainder of the week, but Barabas, who suffered sprained muscles in his right leg, probably will be lost for at least 10 days. The pair were injured in scrimmage—a scrimmage that would make the Spanish revolution seem like a sham battle by comparison.

Toughness, to a certain degree, is going to pay big dividends for ambitious football men at Georgetown, or so it seems to the casual observer. With two scrimmages under their belts in six days the Hoyas are farther advanced at this stage than they have been at any time in the past—even when Lou Little was at the helm, and battling like strange alley cats in practice. The spirit is better than it has been in 10 years. Little and Mills both failed to get the co-operation, fire and dash out of their men Hagerty is getting from this group. It's really a revelation.

Riofski Looks Good.

Things are getting rather tough for Red Hardy, the big center whom "Mush" Dubofsky expected to be one of the East's best, but who is finding it difficult to be even best at Georgetown with "Lefty" Riofski around. "Lefty" is destined to be the No. 1 snapperback if he continues to show the form that marked his play in both scrimmages. His defensive play has been brutal, no less, and he tears huge rents in the opposing wall on the offense, taking the play wholly away from the veteran. Hardy has the natural ability and should be able to hold his own against this newcomer, but Red picked up the loafing habit last autumn when competition was scarce and is finding it hard to regain the fighting form that made him an outstanding freshman. If he does come through, he can thank "Lefty" for the competition that made him get back in stride, and if he doesn't, he can still blame "Lefty's" inspired play for getting his position.

Another finding much favor in Hagerty's eye is Johnny Frank, a guard, who stands head and shoulders above the others, and sometimes stands the others on their head and shoulders. Frank, who won a regular guard assignment against Roanoke last season after being shifted from end, is performing beautifully, charging and tackling like a demon. If he continues to go ahead, Tehaan, Stadler and Shuker, all good men, will have to split up the other guard job between them.

Mike Petroskey and Ed Bodine arrived in camp yesterday, bringing the squad to full strength. Mike brought a nice piece of hemstitching on his scalp to show for his efforts in a New England Industrial League play-off. He was a pitcher, you recall, but it seems he caught one—on his head.

Federal Workers Stage Meet Today

Mary Lavezzo, of the Department of Justice. Miss Shea chalked up an enviable sprint record in Alabama before coming to Washington. Miss Stephens will be out to crack her own world's record for the distance.

While the appearance of the 18-year-old Olympic champion is the shining light of the third annual interdepartmental meet, she will be ably supported with a cast of former college stars. At the same time, keen feeling has been aroused anent the battle for team honors, with Agriculture, Justice and Department of Treasury set to fight it out for the trophy won by the Aggies last year.

Among the better known athletes going into action are Arnold Preheim, 1934 national A. A. U. decathalon champion, who will represent Agriculture and holds meet records in the shot put, pole vault, discus throw and javelin throw. Roger Leverton, former all-sport star at the University of Richmond, will compete under the Justice colors in general and Bureau of Investigation in particular. He holds both the high and low hurdle marks.

McNelly in Ten Events.

A newcomer, Thomas F. McNelly, captain of the 1933 Holy Cross track team, and finalist in the broad jump in the Olympic tryouts in 1932, has entered in ten events and should be a powerful point-producer for Agriculture. Dr. Ben Chitwood, racing for Agriculture, is the favorite among the Government employes to take the mile run, but a late entry announced yesterday of Lieut. Richard Bauer, former West Point runner, has brought a new threat to the fore.

The 100-yard dash mark of 10.4, held by Red Oliver, of Texas, should be severely tested with no less than 17 sprinters entered in the event. Preheim, McNelly, Leverton, Bradley, of Agriculture and Clow, of Justice, figure to be the chief threats in this feature.

Record Books Reveal Hubbell's Title to 'Best'

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Here's the way the record books show why Carl Hubbell, the Giants' ace lefthander, is just about the best pitcher in the big leagues this year:

Won 13 straight since July 13.

Started 12 times; pitched 12 full games, one at 10 innings.

Went in for relief once and pitched hitless ball for three innings.

Allowed 79 hits in the 112 innings he pitched in his streak.

VA. SOX PLAY.

The Virginia White Sox ball club will play the Petworth A. C. of Washington tomorrow at 3 p. m. at Baileys Cross roads, Va.

57 Government Netmen Start Title Quest

A field of 57 tennis players will begin swinging racquets today in opening rounds of the fourth annual United States Government employes' men's championships, starting this morning on the Potomac Park courts.

Gunning for the title held by Tony Latona, wiry playground instructor, will be such ranking netmen as Ralph McElvenny, Ed Mather, Ray Stocklinski, Herb Shenkin and Alan Staubly, all of whom are on the seeded list. Latona heads the select group, seeded No. 1, with the above quintet rated in the order named, and Arthur Simmons and Morgan (Happy) Jacobs, seeded No. 7 and No. 8, respectively.

The women's singles and men's doubles entries will close at 2 p. m. today at the Tennis Shop, 1019 Fifteenth street northwest, National 5165. Mary Ryan is expected to defend her women's crown, and Latona and McElvenny loom as probable successors to their team title. Both events commence tomorrow.

Two Rounds Today.

The men's field will be required to play two rounds today, winners of the first round meeting in the succeeding bracket at 1 p. m.

Notable chiefly because it is the first major tournament of the Washington season, in which no-sure fire favorite has been among the entries, th event has taken on all the trappings of being a hectic scramble. Latona, McElvenny and Mather top the field by a slight margin, but with little to choose among them on the basis of their season's records.

Latona faces Robert Loney in his first round match; McElvenny plays Robert Hancken; Mather encounters Alec Mitchell, jr., and Stocklinski drew a bye, Latona, incidentally, is out for his third straight championship. McElvenny won the title the first year the tourney was held.

Walker Given Job at Quarter For Cards

Signal Caller Beginning to Reap Benefits; Squad Ahead of Last Year.

Two long, lean years of patient and persevering reserve duty in Catholic University's backfield apparently is beginning to bear dividends for Howard (Dixie) Walker, the fastest boy in a football uniform at Brookland. Dixie yesterday was assigned to the quarterback post on the second team, a position that is virtually on par with the regular job.

Although handicapped by a painful back injury, Dixie, a stocky, muscular individual, stole the show in two games last season. One, unfortunately, was the DePaul fracas, which resulted in the lone smirch on Catholic's record. Even so, Dixie engineered a drive that brought the Cardinals to DePauls goal-line, and but for a muffed lateral pass they would have scored a touchdown that would have turned the tide of battle.

On All-Opponent Team.

It was a different story against West Virginia Wesleyan, however, and Master Walker did everything but lead the band, tearing off several long runs and backing up the line on defense in expert fashion. Recognizing his brilliant efforts, the Bobcats voted him the quarterback post on their all-opponent eleven.

Installation of Walker at a signal-calling post gives the team four men for this important position. Spec" Foley will occupy the No. 1 role, then come Walker, Max Brinkman and Don Kincaid, a promising sophomore.

Catholic's squad is just about two weeks ahead of last year regarding conditioning, and Coach Dutch Bergman expects to turn on the heat and let 'em go full blast Monday. The lone casualty is Joe Anthonavage, regular guard, who is nursing back and leg bruises suffered in a fall from a scaffold while painting his dad's house.

Maryland A. C. Signs Lee Carlin

Lee Carlin, blond bruiser who captained and directed George Washington's 1933 gridiron forces, last night signed a contract to play with the Maryland Athletic Club, Washington's entry in the newly organized Dixie League.

In the proverbial pink after a strenuous summer spent on golf links and in swimming pools, Carlin declared himself ready for the best season of football. Since graduating from the downtown school he has played in only a few games, taking things easy. But the old game's lure has drawn him from retirement.

Carlin is the nineteenth player to affiliate with the team, which is drawing on men from Maryland and Catholic University, as well as George Washington. Practice will begin in earnest Sunday at Duffy Stadium, Seat Pleasant. Drills are scheduled three nights each week and Sundays until September 27, when Maryland travels to Richmond for its league debut against the Richmond Arrows.

Reds Buy Posedel.

Portland, Oreg., Sept. 11.—Rollie Schefter, business manager of the Portland Coast League Baseball Club, said today William J. Posedel, right-handed pitcher, has been sold to the Cincinnati Nationals for spring delivery. Posedel has won 19 and lost 10 games this season.

PLAYS, WANTS GAME.

The Georgetown A. C. will play the Manhattan Beer ball club today at 3 p. m. on the South Ellipse. All players report. Georgetown is seeking a game for tomorrow. Call West 3908 after 6 p. m.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Wherever the line is forming for the distribution of manager's bouquets, Chicago's Mr. Jimmy Dykes deserves a place somewhere near the front for the very good reason that he has done a swell job of managing the White Sox.

POVICH.

Mr. Dykes has his White Sox up in second place making serious motions to stay right there until the end of the season, despite the fact that before the firing started in the American League race the White Sox and the first division were deemed to be as far apart as Hitler and Mrs. Stalin.

His White Sox are the products of Dykes' own astute supervision. Under his regime, Vernon Kennedy and Johnny Whitehead have blossomed as the two cleverest young pitchers on any one American League team, Luke Appling has matured as the league's best shortstop and it was Dykes who had the patience to await the development of the bungling Zeke Bonura into a better than tolerable first baseman.

And it was Dykes, too, who recognized Luke Sewell as still one of the league's really good catchers when Washington discarded him at the end of the 1934 season. For two years the Sox have had splendid protection behind the bat, while Washington yearned for even half-decent catching. And it was Dykes who took Pitcher Bill Dietrich, deemed a failure by the A's and Nats, and turned him up as perhaps the year's best bargain.

It is anything but faint praise that Irving Vaughan, Chicago baseball writer, offers in the cause of the piano-legged Dykes in this week's edition of Sporting News. And chief among the secrets of Dykes' success with his Sox, according to Vaughan, is the big little man's ability to make his ball players play ball for him 100 per cent.

Out there at third base where, at the age of 40 he is still giving the Sox a fair sort of infield protection, Dykes knows that a younger man might cut off some of those base hits that zing past him, but no White Sox pitcher has ever raised a squawk on that score. Because they like the guy too much, and because there isn't another third baseman within call who figures to do a better job of it.

It was exactly 26 years ago when Dykes first set foot on a baseball diamond as a uniformed ball player. From 1910 to 1914 he was a catcher on the Upper Darby (Pa.) High School team, jeopardizing his amateur standing by playing a bit of sandlot ball at the munificent wage of 50 cents per game.

He had drifted to Seaford, Del., in 1916 when a pair of A's scouts spotted his throwing arm and perhaps against their better judgment invited him to Shibe Park for a tryout. The brash young rookie walked into the park one Monday morning, introduced himself and started to the plate for batting practice when he was firmly told that raw rookies don't get batting practice on their first day out.

They couldn't treat Jimmy Dykes, the big-shot star from Seaford, that way and Dykes sneaked around to the clubhouse after the game, gathered up his clothes and vanished. He was through with the big leagues. But not for long, kindly Connie Mack sought him out, draped a paternal arm around his shoulder and talked him into playing for the A's farm at Gettysburg.

They brought him back the next season and took him South in 1918, but the war-time draft caught the rotund Dykes and he was shunted to Camp Greenleaf, Ga., for a bit of soldiering. A transfer later shipped him to Parker Hill Hospital No. 2 in Boston.

Dykes never did learn what reveille or taps meant, according to Vaughan's biography of the big little man who even at that time was almost as easy to walk over as step around. Neither did Dykes ever discover first hand just where this war was going on. He was too busy playing baseball with the Army team to be bothered about such details.

Well, he joined up with the A's again after the war and because he could pitch, catch, play every position in the infield or outfield, Mack shifted him about in every emergency. It was ten years before he got a regular job playing third base, but he absorbed a lot of baseball. The current American League standings vouch for that.

Girl Athletes Deemed 'Type' In Demand at Hollywood

Hollywood, Sept. 11 (AP).—The woman's world of sports may become the happy hunting ground of movie talent scouts in their search for modern film types.

Today's pictures, Director George Cukor said tonight, demand "forthright, direct, matter-of-fact types."

The place to find them, he believes, is in the ranks of the divers and swimmers, golfers and tennis players, the feminine athletes.

Kay Stammers, the English tennis star, now at Forest Hills, is said to be under the eyes of movie talent scouts and one studio is grooming the skater, Sonja Henie, for stardom. Her first picture went into production this week.

Cukor would even direct the talent hunters' attention to Helen Wills Moody, although aware that her nickname, "Poker Face," indicates she lacks something that is essential in acting before the cameras.

"Feminity has been thoroughly debunked," says Cukor, currently directing Greta Garbo. "Women today don't use the obvious or feminine wiles they were so wont to exercise in the past to get what they want. They have guile, of course, but they are more direct, more forthright—like the athletes."

Phillies Buy Young.

Oklahoma City, Sept. 11 (AP).—E. J. Hemphries, vice president of the Oklahoma City Texas League baseball team, announced today the sale of Del Young, second baseman, to the Philadelphia National League Club.

The deal was an outright cash sale but also involved the release of Infielder Stanley Sperry to the local club.

Injuries Take Two Colonial Gridmen

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Camp Letts, Md., Sept. 11.—Misfortune's scrawny arm reached out today and caught two George Washington gridmen with a vicious tackle that sent them limping to the showers, casualties of the season's initial scrimmage.

The first was Allen Holt, left end, who aggravated an old back injury originally incurred in spring practice, and the second, Guy Renzaglia, promising sophomore guard, who left the field hobbling on a badly bruised knee. They will be lost for several days.

Coach Jim Pixlee, however, was satisfied to get off with only two cripples. In the past recruits have been carried off the field by the score, and today's casualties constitute the smallest list the Colonials have hd at this stage of practice at any time in the past four years.

Sampson Looks Strong.

Pixlee sent the boys through a brisk sham battle that lasted the better part of two hours and sent them to their bunks on the verge of exhaustion. The afternoon's hero popped up in the person of Vic Sampson, halfback who is destined to assume the role left vacant by Tuffy Leemans' departure. Covered with dust, perspiration oozing from every pore, Sampson drilled through tackle and skirted the ends for several long gains, and, Pixlee noticed with satisfaction, he didn't stop when hit.

Out Fishin'

by Jack Hawley

On September 11, 1935, this column reported "the largest catches of bluefish to date." Today anglers are finding conditions opposite, few fish are being caught but there is a "rub" and a "why" they are not being caught. The smart angler will concede the fact that the present abundance of live bait reduces the anglers chances of taking fish to zero.

Late yesterday afternoon, we received word that the bluefish were working north from S. W. Middles to the Putuxant River, breaking water by the acre. We phoned reliable boatmen at Ridge, Md., and points north to Solomons Island, where we interviewed Capt. Harry Woodburn (reliable), who confirmed these reports and added "fish are biting here and at the mouth of the Honga River; the latter place has gone "hog wild" over trout fishing and our boats are returning from there with catches of trout ranging from 60 to 100 per boat. The trout weigh from 1½ pounds to 4 pounds and is conceded by old-time boatmen to be one of the biggest runs in a decade. B. T."

B. T.

Trout, Perch, Hardheads.

Bowen, of Solomons, returned yesterday with his party scoring better than 100 trout, several hardheads and perch. (B. T. B. has a phone.) Capt. Ronald McLaughlin, working for Woodburn, took a vacation and visited the Honga with his family yesterday, net results: 60 trout, a few over 4 pounds, plenty of croakers and large perch. Boats running from Solomons make the trip to the Honga in one hour and 20 minutes. Boats from St. Jeromes Creek make it in about an hour and 50 minutes.

Capt. Charlie Phillips, of Solomons and the Honga, just phoned to say he made a catch today of 93 trout and miscellaneous fish, croakers, spot and perch.

Here is the secret of catching these fish in the Honga: Fish in 4 to 5 feet of water without weight on your lines and fish only on the change of the tide. If you fish at any other time you are going to come home disappointed. Look at The Washington Post's (Friday) tide table and fish at the right time. Remember when fishing for trout, always use a net to lift your fish. Never attempt to lift him by the weight of your line or strength of your rod. This fish has a very weak (weakfish) mouth and consequently more fish are lost through carelessness than precaution.

When you feel the strike remember—never "jerk" your line backward, pull gently and hold the line tight and keep your tension on retrieve steady without allowing any slack from strike to icebox. A slack line or severe jerk on the line will pull the line and hook free. The best illustration we can give you is retrieving trout is like pulling in a "jelly mouth," always ready to pull free.

Bluefish Will Be Caught.

Going back to the bluefish situation we read in an afternoon edition that anglers are going away from the blues because they are "not like" they used to be. Don't kid yourselves, anglers. Busy fisherman are ready for the best catches of the season, believe it or not. We base our predictions upon years of experience, not haphazard guesses just because the bait this year is abundant.

When the water temperature drops a few degrees we think that our competitor will change his premature opinion. Bluefish will be caught this year and plenty of big ones, too.

Intelligent anglers always take into consideration the following: Never consider last year or the year before, but the actual conditions this year, which are as follows: Plenty of bluefish, plenty of bait, remove one and what happens—you can't remove the bluefish, but they can remove the bait; and here is a late report just received from Jack Scrivener, 2115 F street northwest, "caught a 20-pound black bonito and three 7-pound bluefish on S. W. Middles today. Mrs. Scrivener landed the bluefish. We saw acres of large bluefish breaking the water that refused our lures. We were fishing with Capt. Brady McKay, of St. Jeromes Creek." Anglers, go out and get them. You can't catch fish reading fishing columns and then staying at home only to learn that the fellow that went fishing made you wish that you had gone, too; besides salt air is beneficial to our lungs.

WHY RETAIL SALES TOTAL MORE THAN $100,000,000 DAILY

Without the retailer, the structure of business would collapse. And with its breakdown the principles and standards of American life could not be maintained.

Retail sales total more than $100,000,000.00 every shopping day because retailers spend more than $1,000,000.00 daily for newspaper advertising—far more than for any other kind of sales promotion.

Reading the newspaper is an essential habit of the consumer. People depend on it because it alone gives them the news they want.

They turn consciously and eagerly to the advertising in the newspaper because it is related to their immediate locality.

Thus newspaper advertising is point-of-shopping advertising. It shapes daily shopping. It closes the circuit between need and satisfaction.

Lost Friend, in Last-Furlong Rush, Wins Narragansett Feature

Filly, at 4-1, Overtakes Wacoche

Scores by Neck Over Pace-Setter, With Col. Greene Third.

By the Associated Press.

Narragansett Park, Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 11.—Lost Friend, 3-year-old daughter of Chicle, which races in the silks of A. C. Bostwick, showed her best foot under Freddie Smith, here today, rushed up in the last furlong and captured the Esek Hopkins Claiming Stakes by a neck to account for her third win in nine starts this season.

The filly was moving back up in the claiming scale and made good under the light package of 99 pounds to nail Corsicana Stable's pace-setting Wacoche in the drive to the wire and take the top prize of $1,575 from the added purse of $1,500.

She covered the mile and a sixteenth test in 1:45 2-5, a full 2 seconds slower than the track record. An outsider in the betting, she paid $10.50 to win, $6.50 to place and $2.70 to show.

Wacoche, a close favorite, was worth $4.70 to place and $2.40 to show, while Weston W. Adam's Col. Greene, beaten by a head for the place, paid $2.20 for show. The Adams colt was coupled in the betting with Mrs. Edward I. Wade's Up and Up and ruled the top choice of 9,000 crowd.

Wacoche, sent to the top from the break by Johnny Longden, shook off Oak Tree Stable's Bahamas, then weakened to pressure by Col. Greene at the far turn, but came again in close quarters through the stretch. Up and Up ran at those two leaders coming off the back stretch, but Hank Dabson found himself pocketed behind them entering the stretch and had no chance to swing outside in the drive, for Lost Friend was rushing up in the middle of the track to take it all.

J. K. Hossell's Crete, an early trailer, was half a length back of Col. Greene for fourth place, with Bahamas and Araho Stable's New Deal far out of it.

FORGET NOT	(Swain)	104	10	2	5nk	8h	9h	10	42.55

Two-dollar mutuels paid—REDLEY, $7.30, $3.60, $2.00; GENERAL A., $6.40, $4.60; GOOD DAME, $5.10.

REDLEY was outpaced early, met some interference nearing the far turn, was taken to the outside and, moving up steadily, closed with a keen burst of late speed, getting up in the closing strides. GENERAL A., away slowly and badly outpaced during the first half-mile, finished with a rush through the stretch. GOOD DAME went to the front in the opening sixteenth, met stout opposition from TUXPAN, drew clear when reaching the stretch and, holding on well, was no match for the first two when challenged. TUXPAN forced the early pace and held on well to the end. QUEEN VIC, forwardly placed for the first half-mile, retired steadily thereafter.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:49. Off at 2:50. Winner, D. J. Sullivan III's b. f. (4), by Blondin—Miseretti. Trained by S. Hicks. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 1-5, 1:12 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MY BLONDE, $7.10, $3.50, $2.70; JACKFULL, $3.70, $3.10; WESTYS DUCHESS, $4.70.

MY BLONDE was steadied along in pursuit of the pace for the first half-mile, moved up stoutly when called upon, fought it out with JACKFULL all the entire last three-sixteenths and outlasted the latter at the end. JACKFULL, quickest to begin, disposed of PROSECUTOR and, despite holding on gamely, was unable to stave off the winner. WESTYS DUCHESS, unable to keep up early, finished with good energy in the last quarter. ZULU LAD came willingly at the close after being outpaced early. CURRANTS went well and had no excuses. MARY STENSON had a flash of early speed. PROSECUTOR tired. SQUAWKER suffered sharp interference nearing the far turn and was forced to take up.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 3:18. Off at 3:20½. Winner, T. F. Sword's b. f. (2), by Haste—Fair Day. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY DAY, $4.30, $3.00, $2.70; ROYAL SHOOT, $3.60, $3.40; FORTUITY, $10.80.

LADY DAY went to the front immediately, drew clear after swinging from the backstretch, and dominated the running to the end. ROYAL SHOOT moved up fast on the outside nearing the far turn and continued with good courage to the end. FORTUITY went into contention after leaving the backstretch and held on willingly to the close. OPOCA was unable to keep up early and, though closing some ground, was unable to reach the leaders. HOLLUSCHICKIE closed some ground. HIGH EXPLOSION, slow to begin, never could reach the leaders. SIS ROYAL faltered after showing early speed. GREY SHOT weakened.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:50. Off at 3:52. Winner, J. Paul Cooper's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—INFINATA, $16.00, $9.50, $6.50; JACK SNIPE, $10.00, $5.90; PACKAGE, $9.90.

INFINATA, away fast, was taken in hand when outrun and followed in pursuit of the pace for the first half-mile, raced gamely under pressure in the stretch, took command when RICHSTRIKE began tirins and, hard ridden, had enough left to withstand JACKSNIPE. The latter was prominent all the way and closed with good courage. PACKAGE, a trailer for the greater part of the trip, closed with a belated bid and was traveling the fastest of all at the end. BUNNY MARTIN, unable to keep pace early, moved up steadily on the outside in the last quarter-mile. RICHSTRIKE displayed good speed in pace making, faltering badly in the last sixteenth. BRISTLE never prominent.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,500 added. The Esek Hopkins Claiming Stake. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:21. Off at 4:25. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LOST FRIEND, $10.50, $6.50, $2.70; WACOCHE, $4.70, $2.40; COL. GREENE (entry), $2.20.

LOST FRIEND began moving up gradually on the outside after straightening out on the backstretch, responded gamely to pressure in the closing test and, wearing down the leaders, was up in the closing strides. WACOCHE had speed from the outset, was in close quarters through the last furlong and held on well. COL. GREENE, well up all the way, wore down WACOCHE after straightening out in the stretch, but was unable to maintain his advantage in the closing drive. CRETE, a trailer early, closed some ground. UP AND UP, forwardly placed for the first six furlongs, weakened under pressure.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:55. Off at 4:57. Winner, Mrs. Floyd West's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRANDPA'S BOY, $11.60, $6.40, $4.80; LONE HAND, $7.40, $4.80; HARDWARE, $6.30.

GRANDPA'S BOY moved up steadily while gaining clear sailing on the inside down the backstretch, responded gamely to pressure, wore down MISS GINBAR in the lead and held LONE HAND safe at end. The latter, as usual slow to settle into his stride, moved up stoutly on the outside, getting up in the last stride for the place. HARDWARE had speed from the start, withstood determined early opposition from JOY FLAG, surrendered the command to MISS GINBAR, came again and just lost the place in the concluding stride. MISS GINBAR, forwardly placed all the way, drew clear before reaching the stretch, but faltered inside the last sixteenth. FLYING DERE made up some ground.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:26. Off at 5:31. Winner, Araho Stables' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BAY BUDDY, $21.40, $9.30, $6.20; CINAR, $5.10, $4.20; SILVERY WAY, $10.50.

BAY BUDDY had speed from the start, met determined opposition from GLITTER GLOW, disposed of the latter after going six furlongs, drew out, but had to be ridden out to the end to hold CINAR safe. The latter was steadied along back of the pace, moved up menacingly when reaching the stretch, and, after closing in determined fashion, was unable to overhaul the winner. SILVERY WAY, unable to reach the leaders during the opening three-quarters, closed gamely in the drive. HATS OFF was well placed all the way and just failed to last to take the show. LIGHT HEELED was never a threat.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:00. Off at 6:02. Winner, A. G. Tarn's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DANCING BOY, $5.10, $3.50, $3.00; JUST BUCK, $4.80, $4.40; OVERSTIMULATE, $14.10.

DANCING BOY was restrained early, moved up steadily leaving the backstretch, responded gamely to punishment in the stretch, getting up in the closing strides to wear down JUST BUCK. The latter sprinted to the front at once, drew clear and, rated along under slight restraint, held on stubbornly, though unable to withstand the closing bid of the winner. OVERSTIMULATE, a trailer until leaving the backstretch, closed a big gap and was going gamely at the close. UNLAWFUL, reserved while holding a prominent position, lost ground entering the stretch.

U. S. Gold Stock 10.736 Billion, New High Mark

Reserve Balances Rise 30 Million in Week to 6.471 Billion.

By the Associated Press.

The condition statement of Federal Reserve banks showed yesterday that monetary gold stock reached a new high level in the week ended September 9 at $10,736,000,000. This was an increase of $19,000,000 over the previous week and $1,517,000,000 over the same week a year ago.

A $30,000,000 rise in member bank reserve balances to $6,471,000,000 during the week ended September 9 also was shown in the report. This was attributable in part to the increase in gold stocks.

Money in circulation rose $51,000,000 during the week to $2,276,000,000, which the board said was due largely to heavier demands on account of the Labor Day holiday.

The banks' holdings of Government securities, industrial advances and bills bought remained practically unchanged, but bills discounted fell off $1,000,000 to $8,000,000.

Reserve Statement.

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended September 9, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks," said the report, "was $2,479,000,000, an increase of $7,000,000 compared with the preceding week and a decrease of $1,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1935.

"On September 9 total reserve bank credit amounted to $2,482,000,000, an increase of $19,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with increases of $51,000,000 in money in circulation, $30,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and $24,000,000 in November deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts, offset in part by increases of $19,000,000 in monetary gold stock and $6,000,000 in Treasury currency and a decrease of $62,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks. Member bank reserve balances on September 9 were estimated to be approximately $2,000,000,000 in excess of legal requirements."

Half-Year Steel Net Double 1935 Period

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Aggregate net earning of $55,249,000 were reported for the first half of 1936 by 104 companies in the iron and steel industry who produced more than 90 per cent of the total output of the industry, the American Iron & Steel Institute announced today. The earnings were equivalent to $3.92 per ton on 18,559,000 gross tons of iron and steel products turned out.

In the same period of 1935 these companies earned $23,873,000, equal to $2.99 per ton of products produced for sale, while for the full year 1935, earnings amounted to $53,360,000 or $3.01 per ton produced.

The Market

Stocks Advance Irregularly in Less Active Trading; High-Grade Bonds Firm.

New York, Sept. 11.—High grade bonds, including second grade rails, and most of the medium to high priced stocks moved higher in less active trading. Government bonds developed irregularity and traders in the popular priced common stocks were somewhat less interested than was the case yesterday. Most stocks closed a little higher. December wheat ended 1¼ cents higher at 111⅞ cents a bushel.

Stocks drooped a little in the late morning trading, possibly because the steel shares were pressed a little on profit taking. That group has been looked to by other sections to supply the day's trading cue. Steels recovered in the afternoon and held a steady tone at the close. Copper shares, after trailers in a rising market, had a fairly good day, following London in that respect. Oils, on the other hand, which were well liked abroad, were indifferent to long range prophecy of increasing consumption of oil products.

Most of the amusement shares held their strength. Mail orders, farm implements and airplane issues attracted some attention. Rails were rather slow and inclined to soften. The official estimate of car loadings was not available during trading hours, but it was expected to show gains for last week.

Indications of the preponderance of investment over small time speculation was given by the sharp gains in high priced common stocks and preferred issues, most of which have rather thin markets anyhow. Telephone sold at a new high price. Gains of 2 and 3 points were made by Westinghouse, Weston, Republic preferred, Pacific Telephone, Midland Steel preferred, Certain-teed preferred, Associated Dry Goods first preferred, Shell Union preferred and Harvester preferred.

Allied Chemical lurched nearly 7 points on a few sales, and the lack of a good market was uncovered for a few other stocks. On the other hand, New York Shipbuilding preferred jumped another 6 points and Revere Brass preferred added 5 points on higher selling price news.

Foreign Exchange.

Foreign exchange markets were more stable, in spite of the German demonstration against Russia and the reported breakdown of negotiations for a truce in Spain. Francs, supported by both the British and the American exchange funds, were held stationary. Sterling was higher at the start, but was allowed to retreat from sales reported for commercial interests.

The banking picture as shown by the Federal Reserve Board's report this week is one of credit inflation, although some of the increase is due to temporary influences. For example, the rise of $68,000,000 in brokers' loans for the week ended Wednesday scarcely reflected any increase in margin speculation in stocks. Brokers report little and prices moved languidly enough. Rather the expansion in loans was the direct result of the new Treasury financing, involving $400,000,000 of new cash to be borrowed on bonds that already have gone to a premium. To secure funds to make good their subscriptions to the new issues, Government bond dealers borrowed heavily. The broker's loan rise doubtless will wash out in the next week or so.

Currency Rise.

Likewise the rise of $51,000,000 in currency circulation must have been related to first of month operations, and the holiday and seasonal travel demands for cash. However, even in the periods of business slack virtually no reduction in the high level of currency in circulation has taken place, and in the past few months the figure has steadily risen. Circulation is now more than a half a billion greater than a year ago. Business is more active, more men are employed, and commodity prices are higher, but in addition more cash is in hoarding (much of it abroad) and more being actively used.

In New York at least the employment of funds by business continues to rise. This week's expansion was $23,000,000, which is considerable when it is considered that for years companies have been building up their own cash accounts. Meanwhile the banks are in an easier position with the resumption of gold imports. Monetary gold stock rose $19,000,000 and reserves jumped $30,000,000. For the member banks throughout the country the excess reserves figure again has reached $2,000,000,000, and probably will go higher, a firm promise (barring another uplift in reserve requirements) of cheap money.

Borrowing by Banks.

The disclosure in the member bank figures that some banks here had been forced to borrow $18,000,000 in the week ended Wednesday, because they lost $68,000,000 on reserves, principally to Chicago, was a somewhat surprising revelation of the distribution among the banks of the still ample excess reserves of this district. The borrowing took the form of purchases of Federal funds, which provide the cheapest vehicle through which reserve deficiencies can be corrected. Federal funds transactions of this kind show up under "loans to banks" on the asset side and under "borrowings" on the liability side. The loans to banks item on the member bank return rose $23,000,000. Most of the borrowing, it was reported, was done by one large bank. Both the New York and Chicago member banks experienced another large gain in their commercial and miscellaneous loans, the former expanding their advances by $23,000,000 and the latter by $9,000,000.

After Maine.

Wall Street remembers the thud with which the Maine election results struck the stock market four years ago. A few minutes before closing time on Monday the market began to break. The next day, with the Democratic victory known, the assault on prices was renewed with vigor and sent the market sharply lower. This time traders are hoping for a reversal. Polls of the vote indicate a Republican success and the market is expected to act accordingly.

Copper.

Copper stocks revived on the uprising of the expectation of higher prices for the metal. Foreign copper rose to the best price in five years, notwithstanding the recently announced intention of foreign producers to increase their output and the higher production schedule adopted by a leading domestic producer. The truth seems to be that consumption of copper is increasing rapidly enough to justify hope of a higher price before long in this market, especially with the current reluctance of holders of scrap copper to sell. Rising use of metals is a good commercial sign, but it also is connected with wars in progress and preparation for others.

Copper and Cocoa Sell at New Highs

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Export copper and cocoa prices cracked through into new high ground today. Copper circles reported sales of the metal for export at 9.82½-9.87½ cents, the highest since April 20, 1931 when the price was 10.05 cents. Meanwhile in the heaviest wave of buying in weeks cocoa features thrust ahead to reach new highs since July, 1933. Contracts jumped .19 to .22 of a cent a pound, with the staple deliverable in July quoted at 7.62 cents. Trader quarters said the cocoa demand came from British and continental manufacturers and commission sources.

Freight Traffic 29.2 Per Cent Above Year Ago

But Figures for Week Do Not Include Labor Day Holiday.

Loading of revenue freight for the week of September 5 was an increase of 10,938 cars of 1.5 per cent above the preceding week.

Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 312,774 cars, an increase of 11,316 cars above the preceding week, 87,859 cars above the corresponding week in 1935, and 106,791 cars above the corresponding week in 1934.

In the Western Districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week ended September 5 totaled 20,897 cars, a decrease of 3,060 cars below the preceding week this year, and 5,357 cars below the same week in 1935.

Live stock loading amounted to 16,952 cars, an increase of 1,133 cars above the preceding week, and 1,857 cars above the same week in 1935. It was, however, a decrease of 18,898 cars below the same week in 1934. In the Western Districts alone, loading of livestock for the week ended September 5 totaled 13,551 cars, an increase of 798 cars above the preceding week this year and 2,205 cars above the same week in 1935.

Forest products loading totaled 34,344 cars, a decrease of 1,790 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 7,467 cars above the same week in 1935, and 14,815 cars above the same week in 1934.

Ore loading amounted to 56,098 cars, an increase of 308 cars above the preceding week, 24,258 cars above the corresponding week in 1935, and 32,938 cars above the corresponding week in 1934.

All districts reported increases in the number of cars loaded with revenue freight, compared with the corresponding weeks in 1935 and 1934.

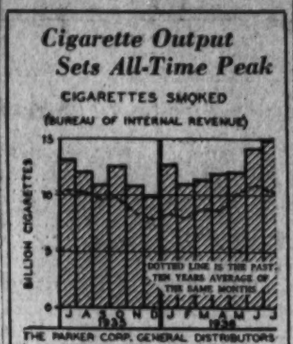
Canada Wheat Crop Under Last Year

Ottawa, Sept. 11 (AP).—The wheat production of Canada for 1936 is estimated at 232,973,000 bushels in a crop report issued today by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Of this amount 220,903,000 bushels is spring wheat, and 12,070,000 bushels fall wheat. The spring wheat crop of the prarie provinces is estimated at 216,000,000 bushels.

The total wheat crop of Canada last year was 277,339,000 bushels, of which 264,738,000 bushels was spring wheat and 12,601,000 bushels fall wheat. The three prairie provinces last year produced 259,500,000 bushels of wheat.

Cigarette Output Sets All-Time Peak



Boston, Mass., Sept. 11.—More cigarettes were smoked in July than in any other month on record. July production of cigarettes exceeded a year ago by 12½ per cent, and in that one month alone was greater than for any full year previous to 1914. Some idea of the growth of this industry is shown by the July output which exceeded by a wide margin all the domestic production in the 21 years from 1870 to 1890 inclusive.

Wheat Advances On Heavy Exports

Chicago, Sept. 11 (AP).—Wheat bounded upward here today, influenced by Winnipeg jumps of almost 3 cents a bushel owing to bullish crop reports and much enlarged export business. Latest estimates were that 2,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat had been bought today for export, chiefly to go to Great Britain. Indications were that in Europe the new Canadian wheat crop had heretofore been overestimated about 20,000,000 bushels. All Winnipeg wheat futures swept to well above $1 a bushel, the Liverpool market having shown unusual strength and climbed to the greatest premium over Winnipeg in many years.

Chicago wheat futures closed strong at the day's top level, 1 cent to 1½ above yesterday's finish; September 112⅝@112¾; December, 111⅞@112; May, 110⅝@110¾. Keystone Steel Sets Record for Earnings

Peoria, Ill., Sept. 11.—The Keystone Steel & Wire Co. reports for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1936, net profit of $1,501,493 after all charges including provision for Federal income and excess profits taxes. This was the largest net profit for such a period in the history of the company and represents a gain of approximately 25 per cent over net of $1,202,790 reported for the preceding fiscal year.

Net of $1,501,493 was equivalent to $1.90 a share on 757,632 shares of capital stock outstanding June 30, 1936, giving effect to the four-for-one split-up of the stock during the year, and after deducting dividends paid on the 7 per cent preferred stock prior to its retirement, January 15, 1936.

Autumn Trade May Surpass Bright Summer

Steel, Telephones, Autos, Freight, Power All Point Upward.

New York, Sept. 11.—Most United States business men have concluded "that the summer of 1936 has been good for trade; that the autumn should be even better," says Time magazine today, listing "indices of a smiling summer" as follows:

"Heaviest of heavy industry, steel had pounded along at 72 per cent of capacity all through August, reaching its highest production peak since 1930.

"An optimistic jingle sounded from the Bell System, which had installed 40,800 more telephones in August, 1936, than in August, 1935.

"Recklessly breaking record after record, the automobile industry reported sales in the third quarter 21 per cent ahead of the corresponding period last year.

"Knee high in quick cash from the bonus, retailers reported that, far from suffering the customary summer slump, their sales were up 10 per cent to 17 per cent in June, July and August.

Car loadings for the last week in August climbed to 753,742 units, a five-year high.

"Consumption of electricity in August's last week was up 18 per cent over last year's similar period.

"Commercial airplane sales, booming through the hot spell, were almost double for the past six months what they were the year before.

"Also at a five-year high of more than $54,000,000,000 was the value of all shares listed on the New York Stock Exchange."

Strike Parley Is Set by Blum; Foes 'Alarmed'

Employer, Labor Groups Will Meet Monday to Discuss New Laws.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Sept. 11.—The spread of occupation strikes led Socialist Premier Leon Blum tonight to call an extraordinary meeting of the signers of the accord which settled the first wave of walkouts faced by his government when it took office in June.

Blum set the meeting of employers' organizations and labor leaders for Monday. Informed persons said the conferees would consider means of putting into effect as soon as possible laws for application of the 40-hour week and collective labor contracts, pushed through Parliament by Blum's administration.

Leaders of Parliament opposition to the government's insistence on neutrality in the Spanish war—one of the causes of the widespread labor trouble—said they viewed the situation "with alarm."

Seek to Allay Fears.

The metal workers' union, however, sought to allay government fears that Leftist workers planned to seize the Renault automobile plant outside Paris in "an experiment" to Sovietize the factory.

Leon Jouhaux, secretary of the General Confederation of Labor, led a delegation from that organization which advised the premier to speed up application of the 40-hour week and collective labor agreements.

Usually reliable sources said Jouhaux warned Blum the confederation might not be able to prevent its members joining the nation-wide strikes unless the government took action quickly.

3,000 Hold Mills.

Three thousand employes held several textile mills in the Vosges Department, where the strike threatened to become general after a deadlock between workers and employers. The latter refused to discuss a settlement until the factories were evacuated.

Strikers occupying an auto-bus garage at Larochell quit the building in compliance with a court order but camped outside its doors, halting bus service.

About 1,000 strikers held a factory at Boulogne. In Evreux, 700 metal workers walked out.

Jean Mitigny, Moderate deputy, announced he intended to question Blum when the Chamber reconvenes on "intrigues which are tending to impose dictatorship on certain parties, labor unions, or on the country."

Bermuda Hails German Plane After Long Trip

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 11.—Two German flying boats bobbed at anchor tonight, one in Manhasset Bay 22 miles from Manhattan, and another in Bermuda, the major part of their job of flying the Atlantic accomplished.

The Aeolus, thwarted in one attempt after having been catapulted from the mother ship Schwabenland off the Azores Tuesday night reached the bay at Hamilton, Bermuda, at 3:31 p. m. (Eastern standard time) today after a 2,063-mile nonstop flight.

She was to take off tomorrow morning for the 770-mile leg to Manhasset Bay, on northern Long Island, to join her sister ship, the Zephir, which arrived here last night after a 22-hour-14-minute nonstop flight from the catapult ship lying 100 miles of Horta.

The Schwabeland already was reported steaming for New York to catapult the two flying boats on a return flight. They are correlating the weather and other flight data on the southern route of the North Atlantic preparatory to the establishment of a commercial airline.

The Schwabenland is due here next Wednesday.

Name in Charges Not His, Suspect Files Court Plea

Attorneys representing J. William Tomlinson, 42-year-old attorney, who faces two indictments charging him with robbery, yesterday asked District Court to quash both of them on the ground that the name contained in the presentments was not his proper name.

Through Attorneys James A. O'Shea, John H. Burnett and Alfred Goldstein, Tomlinson said the Government was in error when it wrote his name as John William Tomlinson in the indictments. He said he had never been known by that name and in explanation of the letter "J" he said the initial was given him shortly after his birth and does not stand for "John" or any other name.

The indictments against the lawyer charge that he and three colored men engineered two robberies in which loot of approximately $3,800 was obtained. He is at liberty on bond of $2,000.

Effect of Whisky On Drivers Tested

Blackpool, Eng., Sept. 11 (AP).—Dr. Horace Middleton Vernon, M.D., M.A., tonight told the British Association for the Advancement of Science that alcohol makes the motorist's heart beat faster.

He informed the assemblage of England's most noted scientists and learned men that research had shown whisky makes motorists drive a bit faster and less accurately.

Dr. Vernon said the National Institute of Industrial Psychology had rigged up a dummy automobile and created artificial conditions approximating road driving.

Then, he said, the National Institute of Industrial Psychology had bought drinks of whisky and beer for 15 experienced motorists.

Dr. Vernon reported that mild doses of beer seemed to have little effect on the motorists, but, he said, indulgence in more than one large shot of the National Institute of Industrial Psychology's whisky reduced by 6 per cent the time of the driver's reactions and increased by 12 per cent driving errors.

Bond Theft Clew Hinted in Arrest

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Solution of a recent $2,000,000 series of bond thefts here and in Chicago was believed nearer tonight when police arrested a man they said possessed four $1,000 Louisiana State bonds stolen from a Chicago brokerage house last February.

The man, who was identified by police as Paul Stern, 39, of New York, said he was a baseball bookmaker and that the bonds had been given to him several months ago as collateral on a bet by a man he identified as "Roth." Stern was charged with receiving stolen goods and will be arraigned in felony court tomorrow.

Ten Louisiana State bonds were stolen from S. B. Chapin & Co. in Chicago in February by persons whose technique was similar to that which characterized a bond theft of $1,500,000 from the Bank of Manhattan Trust Co. in New York in January, 1935, and others from the United States Trust Co.

Dutch Royal Betrothal Brings Idle $1.70 Each

The Hague, Sept. 11 (U.P.).—Celebrating the betrothal of Princess Juliana to Prince Bernard von Lippe-Biesterfed, the Netherlands government decided today to grant a bonus of 2½ guilders ($1.70) to each of the country's 500,000 unemployed. The grant will provide an appropriation of $850,000.

Deposit Surety Draws Attack From Hamilton

G. O. P. Campaign Manager Heads West After 3 Conferences.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 11.—Republican Chairman John D. M. Hamilton headed back toward the West tonight after a three-day Eastern trip, in which he conferred with leaders at Cleveland, Washington and New York.

He will address the Indiana Editorial Association tomorrow at Lake Wawasee, Ind., and go from there to Chicago.

At a press conference today he attacked the Roosevelt Administrations bank deposit insurance program and reiterated an asertion he made in Washington yesterday that the banking structure of the Nation is less sound than it was in 1932.

"Banks Flooded."

"Today you have flooded the banks until the ratio of banking investments in Government bonds is higher than it has ever been in the country's history, and higher than in any other country," Hamilton said.

"If the ratio is higher and you attempt to secure these deposits through the Federal Insurance Deposit Corporation which in turn invests its monies in Government bonds you are simply creating a holding company of securities. And Mr. Roosevelt, I understand, is opposed to holding companies."

He added that President Roosevelt himself said in 1932 that when the country "is spending $3,000,000,000 a year it is on the road to bankruptcy."

Farley Answers.

Hamilton said he would like the Democartic National Committee to make public who paid for the President's special train on his visit to the drought area recently, and expressed the opinion the President's visit was anything but non-political.

At Democratic headquarters, James A. Farley, national chairman, commented on Hamilton's statement that the banking structure was unsound.

"Hamilton's statement is just about as ridiculous as the other statements he has made during the past month. It is an insult to the intelligence of the American people," Farley said.

Mother Loses Plea, Son to Die For Six Killings

By the Associated Press.

Spokane, Wash., Sept. 11 (AP).—Federal Judge J. Stanley Webster today refused to halt the hanging of Leo Hall, convicted in connection with the Erland's Point Mass murders. He was sentenced to die at 11 o'clock tonight.

Walla Walla, Wash., Sept. 11.—A middle-aged mother fought frantically to save husky Leo Hall from the gallows on which he was doomed to die tonight for the Erlands Point mass murders.

The tearful pleadings of Mrs. Elizabeth Hall, who flew here from Seattle, resulted early today in postponement of the execution so that she might have a last word with her son, condemned for the killing of six persons during a robbery attempt.

Everett Butts, Hall's counsel, flew here today to place his client's case before Judge Webster. The Federal court, Butts insisted, was the "court of last resort" in his long fight to save Hall from a hangman's noose.

He referred to a Federal statute which h esaid gave the Federal court the right to intervene in the case. Judge Webster, after reading it, declared:

"I have no more right to interfere in the execution than a State court would have to interfere in the con-Hall awaits execution.

Butts indicated he would return immediately to Walla Walla, where Hall awaist execution.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hall, the condemned man's mother, did not accompany Butts to Spokane.

In support of Mrs. Hall's contention that her son was innocent was an affidavit made yesterday by Theodore E. Anderson, of Seattle, alleging Hall was far from the scene at the time of the mass murders more than two years ago.

Warden J. M. McCauley said Hall, 34, also continued to assert his innocence.

Hall originally was to have hanged at 12:30 a. m. (3:10 a. m. Eastern standard time) today. His mother flew from Seattle to Olympia last night and pleaded in vain with Gov. Clarence D. Martin for a reprieve. The Governor, however, assured her Hall would not die until she had a chance to see him.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Flieder and their four guests were slain in a cottage at Erlands Point, on Puget Sound, the night of March 28, 1934. The cottage showed signs of a terrific battle.

It was almost two years before authorities found a clew.

Then, on the confession of Mrs. Paulos, they charged Hall with the crime.

Mrs. Paulos testified she accompanied Hall to the cottage with the idea of committing robbery. She said she fled in terror when some of the victims showed resistance and Hall began killing them.

Crane, Paper Magnate, Wills $5,000,000 Estate

Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 11 (U.P.).—Personal property of $4,998,382 and real estate valued at $127,330 were shown when an inventory of the estate of Zenas Marshall Crane, Dalton paper manufacturer, who died at Boston, April 29 last, was filed in Berkshire Probate Court today.

Eleven Currier & Ives lithographs, done between 1840-70, were appraised at $3,890. The inventory showed Crane was the largest single block stockholder in Crane & Co., Inc., having 7,800 shares.

Board Is Told Violence Used In News Strike

Hearst Counsel Obtain Admission; Interstate Business Argued.

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, Sept. 11.—Using the Government's own exhibit, a full-page newspaper advertisement in which the Washington Industrial Council criticized the Post-Intelligencer newsroom strike, Hearst counsel late today obtained the first evidence of picketing violence before the National Labor Relations Board.

It came when C. B. Lindeman, associate publisher of the Post-Intelligencer and assistant secretary of Hearst Publications, Inc., was being cross-examined by Edward G. Woods, chief of the Hearst counsel. Lindeman had been called by Robert Watts, the board's associate general counsel, had identified the advertisements and said he and Post-Intelligencer men had a part in writing it.

Woods asked Lindeman "is this statement about ten men brutally beaten by the mob true to your best knowledge?"

Lindeman answered: "I saw four of the men who were hurt and obtained the stories from six others."

The hearing developed more testimony designed to show the paper engaged in interstate commerce and thus was subject to National Labor Relations Board jurisdiction.

Contract deliverymen, a union mailer and a Post-Intelligencer editor were the principal witnesses by whom Watts attempted to set up evidence to offset the Hearst paper's challenge to labor board jurisdiction.

The guild is seeking reinstatement of two of its members who were discharged from the newspaper staff. Guildsmen went on strike August 13 after their dismissal and the paper suspended publication when other union employes declined to pass through picket lines to their jobs.

Oliver Morris, Post-Intelligencer city editor, testified his staff "covered" news events outside the State only on rare instances. He recalled only two cases when he assigned men to out-of-State assignments.

Asked by Watts if the paper was continuing to pay him during the suspended publication, Morris said he was 'receiving some salary' for radio broadcasting work.

F. L. Galloway, mailer, testified about 200 to 300 copies of the paper went to Victoria, British Columbia, some were sent to Alaska and some to Portland, Oreg.

William A. Duby, contract deliveryman, also testified to out-of-State shipments of Post-Intelligencers.

Norris Accepts His Nomination As Independent

By the Associated Press.

Lincoln, Nebr., Sept. 11.—After a generation of insurgency within the Republican Party, Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, today left its ranks to campaign for re-election as an independent.

He accepted a nomination tendered him by 40,504 Nebraskans in petitions filed with the secretary of State last Wednesday, saying he felt an obligation to subordinate his own wishes for retirement to their demand for his return to the Senate.

Ever a critic of the principle of party regularity, Norris, 75 years of age, will support the Democratic nominee this year for the third consecutive Presidential campaign, President Roosevelt, in turn, has given personal support to Norris' campaign.

Norris is expected to arrive here next week from his summer home near Waupaca, Wis., to plan his campaign. His record support of the issues may include support of the New Deal's farm, power development and utilities regulation programs, and of its stand toward union labor.

His opponents for the Senate will be former Representative Terry Carpenter, the Democratic nominee who has Townsend plan backing, but was repudiated by the Democratic State convention in favor of Norris, and former Representative Robert G. Simmons, of Lincoln, Republican.

Missing Boy's Kin Ask Help of Public

Detroit, Sept. 11 (AP).—Thirty thousand more circulars describing 20-month-old Harry Browe were ordered distributed today as police admitted they were "completely at sea" in the search for the missing child.

At the same time the parents of the boy, who vanished last Saturday from his carriage in Clark Park, here, appealed to the public to give the kidnapers—if the child was abducted—a chance to return the baby. Acting Chief of Detectives William J. Collins issued a similar plea.

"People have passed our house in streams since our baby has been missing," said Robert Browe, the child's father. "It would be hard for anyone to approach with so many people around. I am asking the curious if they will kindly stay away. We appreciate their sympathy but we want to make it as easy as possible for the baby's return."

Collins said if the baby is in the hands of kidnapers, he was "appealing to them to turn him over to any clergyman whom they may choose."

27 Held as Pickets In Strike in Alabama

Talladega, Ala., Sept. 11 (AP).—Twenty-seven textile workers were arrested today shortly after they were charged in grand jury indictments with conspiring to keep the Samoset textile mills and its employes from working.

A picket line about one of the Samoset mills recently was involved in a fight in which two persons were shot and killed and 17 wounded.

Eight men are under murder indictments in connection with the killings, including an organizer for the United Textile Workers of America. The fight occurred when officers and civilians arrived at the picket line in automobiles.

D. C. White Slave Plot Charged As 2 Couples Are Held on Bond

Charged with conspiring to violate the white slave act, two men and two women were held on $5,000 bond each when they were arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday.

Their hearing will be held next Wednesday, the commissioner said. The prisoners all entered pleas of not guilty.

They are James Nelson Ostrander, alias "Million Dollar Jimmy," 35, and Domenico Cassetta, 39; Avery Conroy, 24, and Barbara Russell, 30.

All were arrested Thursday night by Department of Justice agents, acting on complaint by the commissioner's office. The men were arrested at North Beach, Md., and the women here.

The men are charged specifically with conspiring with the women to bring other women from North Beach to the District for immoral purposes.

Co-operation of Sergts. Blick, Fawcett and Paul Little, of the Metropolitan police, was termed "splendid" by the Justice Department, in acknowledging the arrests.

U. S. Considers New Farm Law To Aid Tenants

Proposal of Administration May Be Advaned During Campaign.

A new farm tenancy law, offering farm-buying opportunities to some 2,800,000 tenant farmers and share croppers is being considered seriously by the Administration, it was learned yesterday. There is a possibility that the proposal will be advanced in the course of the Presidential campaign.

The measure, it was understood, would provide for the Government to obtain farm property for resale to tenants on easy terms. It would differ in numerous particulars from the bill introduced at the last session of Congress by Senator John H. Bankhead, of Alabama, and Representative Marvin Jones, of Texas, and passed by the Senate.

It would not provide for any independent corporation to administer the program, it was understood, and would avoid mentioning any such sum as $1,000,000,000, originally called for, calling for a start of the program on a small scale. In addition, there would be a tightening up of provisions for resale of the land to tenants to avoid creating a huge class of farmers heavily indebted to the Government.

'A Living Wage,' Coughlin's Plea In N. Y. Speech

System of 'Pay by Hour' Assailed by Priest in First Talk in East.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 11.—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin carried his campaign into the East tonight with an appeal to a throng at Ebbets Field not to "sit idly by and be satisfied by a handout of the New Deal given you as an insult."

The Detroit priest asserted that problems of production had been solved, and there remained the problem of distribution. The modern machinery, he said, "produces 100 times" what his ancestors did.

"Yet you are told by this stupid, pagan system of economics that you must be paid by the hour and not by what you produce," he said.

"This system must pass, and until it does pass let no man, let no candidate for the Presidency, tell you that there is a New Deal."

The mass production industries must turn, he asserted, "to a living annual wage," and this he defined as "an $1,800 minimum for a father who has a wife and three children at home."

He asserted that the New Deal had failed in an effort to restore price levels to their 1926 status. The price of food to the farmer, he said, is "still at depression levels, but the cost of food to you living in the cities is going on a Zeppelin to Germany."

Jury Is Picked In Black Legion Shooting Case

10 Men Are Facing Trial; Veniremen Will Visit Alleged Plot Scene.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 11.—A jury of ten men and four women was selected today for the trial of ten of the 13 men charged with shooting Charles A. Poole to death because he had learned too much about the terroristic activities of the hooded Black Legion.

The selection of the jury began 10 days ago, and four panels of veniremen had to be summoned before the 12 jurors and two alternates were chosen.

Poole's death on a lonely road last May 12 touched off a long series of investigations of the night-riding secret society, and led to the development of nearly a score of cases against members of the order, but the Poole shooting is the first major one to come to trial.

Circuit Judge Joseph A. Moynihan ordered that the jury be taken to inspect the meeting hall in which the State charges Poole's death was plotted. The trip, scheduled for tomorrow morning, will precede the opening of testimony.

Twelve men, several of whom have confessed they were present on the "straightening out party" when Dayton Dean cut short Poole's pleas for mercy by firing five shots into his chest, are on trial, but two of the defendants waived a jury. Dean, who said he killed Poole because "that was my order," already has pleaded guilty and is awaiting sentence. He is expected to be the principal witness among the 53 the State has summoned.

Attorneys on both sides said they believed at least two weeks more will be required to try the case. The defense has called "between 75 and 100" witnesses.

The survivors include the widow, the former Mae Catherine Glenn, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Willoby Mason, of Fairbanks, Alaska, daughter by a previous marriage and Mrs. Fred H. Gray, of Orville, Calif., a sister. The Fourth Estate property some years ago passed to control of Editor and Publisher.

On the Air Today

The piece de resistance for the premier of the new full hour Kate Smith series is to be "Kate and the Babe"—the "Babe" being none other than George Herman Ruth, erstwhile king of swat. The idea of appearing before the country's listeners as a comedian was the Babe's. In fact, he's serious about being funny on the air.

For the opener of Kate's new show (next Thursday night) the Babe will be presented in a domestic comedy skit. One Robert J. Ross is preparing the script. Ross has been a script hireling for George White's Scandals and the Marx Brothers.

It all came about when Kate and Ruth met on a golf course at Lake Placid. They paused to pass the time of day—and remained to merge their common interests in the future. The Babe 'lowed as how he always had wanted to go on the air as a performer—not a baseball player. Kate said: "Why don't you join my program?"

"I will if I can be a comedian," Ruth replied. "I'd like to try out an entirely different career."

That's the way it happened. If the first show clicks, the Babe is in the comedian business at least for the length of life of the new "Bandwagon" series.

There's this much about it: the air always is ready for a new comic. No field of talent ever was drained drier quicker, no demand ever more persistent than for radio funny men. That in the face of the conspicuous absence of such one-time leaders as Jack Pearl, who obviously has palled on the air public or he would yet be starring in dialect. Having a flair—or a reputation— for comedy is one thing. Getting material and controlling the public's consuming interest is another.

A paragraph in Variety, standby of the show business, advises that Bill Spargrove, announcer for the Iowa broadcasting net and one of m' old pals at KSO, in Des Moines, pulled a slicker on the Presidential announcers when they were in Des Moines last week for the drought session. Spargrove got Bob Trout and Carleton Smith together and not only interviewed them together—but wound up by having them interviewing each other. If you can visualize the gravity of rival nets in action when the President is on the air, you can appreciate the uniqueness of this air duet by Trout and Smith, even though on neutral ground.

Here and there: Grace Vitality, the girl soprano find of WJSV earlier in the year, sings tomorrow afternoon at 5:45 after a long vacation from the air . . . WOL's Amateur Reporters' Club celebrates its birthday this morning at the studios with a birthday cake and trimmings . . . WMAL also begins a daily "Dinner Music" half hour September 29—6 to 6:30 p. m.

• • • •

Jim McGrath's "Today's Prelude" lost a round to "Cheerio" last spring and was yanked off the daily schedule accordingly. It had its many friends, however, and I assume that its return is coincident with the change from daylight time guaranteeing no conflict with "Cheerio." Incidentally, "Cheerio" adds a new quarter hour to his schedule Tuesday afternoons, effective the twenty-ninth. It will be a sponsored program!

Hughes Assails Administration At Langley Fair

Richmond Business Man Leads Attack by Foes of the New Deal.

"Home on the Range," the country fair being held at Langley, Va., echoed to the sound of political thunder last night as Virginia Republicans and Jeffersonian Democrats gathered to attack the New Deal.

Principal speaker at the outdoor program, held after both groups had dined a la barbecue, was Hunter R. Hughes, young Richmond business man. He represented the newly-formed Jeffersonian Democrats, who were making their first public demonstration last night.

Hughes explained his group had not broken away from the old Democratic party but is merely co-operating with the Republicans to defeat Roosevelt. They were anti-Democratic only on national issues, he said.

The present Administration, Hughes declared, is tending toward "communism, socialism and anarchism."

He said the purpose of his group is to attempt to return to the Jeffersonian theory of democracy and to enable citizens to be as free as possible from Governmental interference.

Praises Supreme Court.

Only the Supreme Court, said Hughes, had kept the Administration from usurping all Governmental power. He credited that body with "stopping regimentation of American business, labor and agriculture" through its NRA and AAA decisions.

"If the people return the Democrats to power in November," he warned, "the Administration will find some way to remove or replace the Supreme Court."

Virginians, Hughes said, were prone to accept party labels even if the meaning of the label had changed.

"During the past few years the Republicans have had to rally to defend States' rights," he declared.

John Locke Green, Congressional candidate from the Eighth Virginia District, attacked the spending policies of the New Deal and criticized Howard W. Smith, present Representative from the district, for failure to explain New Deal policies.

Another speaker, John H. Conaughton, of Washington, denounced National Chairman Farley's system of job appointments.

Baltimorean Tries 4 Suicide Methods Before Succeeding

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 11 (U.P.).—Peter Antol, 34-year-old ironmaker, impatiently used four different means of committing suicide to kill himself today.

He apparently became temporarily crazed after a quarrel with his wife. He hit her with an iron pipe, fracturing her skull.

Then he tried to drown himself in the bathtub. This didn't work.

Next Antol made a noose from one of his wife's dresses and tried to hang himself from a lighting fixture. The dress broke and he fell to the floor still alive.

He then swallowed a bottle of poison. This was too slow.

He rushed into the kitchen, stuck his head in the gas stove oven and turned on the jets.

Neighbors found him there and took him to a hospital, where he died.

The three Antol children slept peacefully through it all.

Virginia Ave. Pair Win Doubles Title

Bob Richardson and Byron Mathews, of Virginia avenue, yesterday captured the junior doubles tennis championship of the District playgrounds with a straight set victory over Schuyler Jackson and Tom Wadden, of Georgetown.

The new titlists, who succeed Doyle Royal and Harry Landsman, were never extended to the limit in defeating the duo from Georgetown, 6—4, 8—6. The match was played at Chevy Chase.

The eventual winners took off with a 2 to 1 lead, which was quickly pushed up to 5 to 1 in the first set. They chose to relax for a few moments and the Jackson-Wadden team won three straight games, to make the score 5—4. The Virginia Avenue pair rallied to take the set game.

In the second set, the Southeast boys led at 2—1, 4—2 then 5—4. The Georgetown boys got the advantage for the first time at 6—5, winning two games in a row. Their success was short-lived as Richardson and Mathews swept the next three games to take the championship.

Ickes Upholds Indians' Divorce by Separation

Billings, Mont., Sept. 11 (AP).—Legality of the old Indian divorce custom of couples bidding each other "farewell" without benefit of legal procedure was upheld by Secretary of Interior Ickes in a ruling received today by T. H. Burke, Billings attorney.

A suit was brought by an Indian husband to claim property of his former wife, who left him for a new home some years before her death.

The secretary concluded his ruling by saying:

"Certainly the actions on the part of both participants to the marriage ceremony indicate a valid Indian custom divorce, as the decedent lived with several other men and the claimant with at least another woman."

Mills Raise Wages.

Rockwood, Tenn., Sept. 11 (AP).—A wage increase of 10 per cent for more than 900 employes of four plants operated by the Rockwood Hosiery Mills, Inc., was announced today.

WHERE DO YOU SUPPOSE BILL WENT?
SEARCH ME. YOU HEARD HIM SAY HE HAD A SWELL IDEA AND FOR US TO WAIT TILL HE GOT BACK—
BELIEVE ME, IF UNCONSCIOUS HAS ANY IDEAS, I'LL WAIT.
NOW, BESSIE, BILL MAY NOT BE OVERLY BRIGHT, BUT HE'S KIND-HEARTED.
HERE HE IS NOW! WITH HIS DOG! MY STARS, I'D FORGOTTEN HE HAD A DOG.
WELL, MARY, YOU SAID YOU DIDN'T WANT ANYBODY SNOOPIN' 'ROUND YER KITCHEN.

Text of President Roosevelt's Power Address

The text of President Roosevelt's address at the third World Power Conference follows:

I desire to add my personal greeting to the official greeting which it has been the pleasure of the Government of the United States to extend to you.

The United States considers it an honor and a privilege to be the host of the third World Power Conference and of the second Congress of the International Commission on Large Dams.

The World Power Conference and its associated international commission are notable institutions.

It is one of the achievements of our generation that business men, engineers, lawyers, social workers and other people of affairs, should meet in international assemblies, not merely for promotion of the abstract sciences and techniques in which they may respectively be interested, but for exploration of the application of these to national welfare and betterment of the conditions of human life. There are very special reasons why we in the United States prize the opportunity to provide the forum for discussion of the problems which are being presented to your conference.

We are relatively a young nation, facing now the problems of matured national life. Many among you represent nations of longer experience.

We have a strong conviction that any success we may have in organizing the household of this nation now come of age, will depend in large measure on the degree to which and the manner in which we make available the natural energies which have been given us in great abundance. We shall therefore study the records of your proceedings with painstaking care.

For a century population in the United States has increased, both naturally and by immigration, at an exceptional rate; but recently there has set in a decline in the rate of increase.

Experts in vital statistics now calculate that we shall have reached a point of stationary population within approximately the next 25 years.

For two centuries the dramatic aspect of national growth was territorial expansion—successive waves from the Atlantic to the Allegheny mountains, to the Mississippi Valley, to the prairies, to the Rocky Mountains, to the Pacific Coast. The addition of improved lands has come to a stop; in fact, in many parts we have overdone it and must restore some of them to more natural conditions.

With these have appeared other evidences of maturity. For a period following the establishment of the Union about 85 per cent of our people lived on farms; today nearly 75 per cent live in cities and villages During our earlier years the proportion of young people in the population increased much more rapidly than the proportion of old people. Today for various reasons, the proportion of old is increasing more rapidly than the proportion of young people.

With such changes have come also changes in social habits and in points of view.

Under conditions of maturity of a nation there is, justifiably, an increasing concern on the part of nearly every citizen for his economic security. In the earlier days of our nation's youth there was no such dominating concern. As a people we could then be happy-go-lucky—a characteristic of youth.

National maturity requires that we have new points of view, and that we do some things in different ways.

The matter of economic security, I take it, is not to be achieved alone by aiming for restriction of national income—real national income—but by aiming for more abundant and more widely distributed national income. A satisfying standard of living and security, for a national household of nearly 130,000,000 people, is to be realized only by high productivity, broadly and equitably distributed, and wisely proportioned with respect to its drain on natural resources and to the variety of human wants it is destined to satisfy.

Deliberations Significant.

It is for such reasons that your deliberations are of significance to us, and will be followed with minute attention. Your scientific and engineering genius is destroying one world—the world of relative scarcity—but has it yet undertaken to create the new world of abundance which is potential in your command over natural energies? Is creation of greater abundance dependent on further scientific and engineering achievements so much as on suitably organizing and utilizing the engineering already incorporated into your techique

These two questions, more simply stated, resolve themselves into this: Are you and I paying enough attention to "human engineering?"

There are many aspects of the problem. For example, it is possible to conceive that the conversion and application of energy, in the coming generation, will be so directed that half of the population can provide the basic machine-made products necessary for the welfare of the whole population. We can conceive that this would mean that the people between 20 and 50 years of age will be able to produce the basic commodities for themselves and also for all others below and above those ages.

If that condition should arise, it is the duty of you who would be so greatly responsible for it to think what would be the effect on our leisure, our culture and our way of life. I would suggest that the answer should not be left solely in the hands of bankers, Government officials or demagogues.

In anticipation of all manner of possibilities and simultaneously with the study of their far-reaching results, we can and must take every preparatory step now within our power.

Fundamental among these is conservation of resources; their evaluation in terms of the services they may render, including the conditions under which these may be rendered, and their utilization in the light of such evaluation. Although it is a principle of physics that energy cannot be destroyed, it has been revealed by experience that man can destroy those particular forms of energy in which energy is usable by him. In such an evaluation the physical and mental energies of human beings must be included with coal, petroleum, gas, electricity and other forms.

Social Values Essential.

To make such an evaluation, a higher form of accounting than any yet developed by commerce and industry appears to be essential. It must be a form of accounting that takes social values, now left to mere assumption, into its calculations and measures them. If a nation were to establish in its social balance sheet a capital account for its energy assets, and were to charge against that account the water it permits to go unused, as well as the coal and oil that are used; or if the petroleum industry were charged with the gas it permits to go to waste—a quantity that is enormous in the United States; then perhaps all citizens would perceive that public policy and private conduct in respect of natural resources should be quite different from what they now are.

It seems to me, a layman, that the outstanding gift of modern science and engineering to society is greater knowledge of the characteristics of electric energy, together with a very substantial degree of command over it. Its flexibility is what makes it impressive; its transportability; its divisibility.

The invention and adaptation to the use of the steam engine was a great event in human history. It caused an industrial revolution; it remade the world. It created new social-industrial problems many of which are still far from solution. It is not irrational to believe that in our command over electric energy a corresponding industrial and social revolution is potential; that it may already be under way without our perceiving it.

One of the social changes brought on by the invention and use of the steam engine was the concentration of workers into large factories and of people into large cities. We have not known what to do about it. Workers had to go to the steam engine, whose energy could not be divided into parts and sent out to them.

Power Held Factor.

Now we have electric energy which can be and often is produced in places away from where fabrication of usable goods is carried on. But by habit we continue to carry this flexible energy in great blocks into the same great factories, and continue to carry on our production there. Sheer inertia has caused us to neglect formulating a public policy that would promote opportunity for people to take advantage of the flexibility of electric energy; that would send it out wherever and whenever wanted at the lowest possible cost. We are continuing the forms of over-centralization of industry caused by the characteristics of the steam engine, long after we have had technically available a form of energy which should promote decentralization of industry. What is economically sound is to be determined by social accounting more than by present methods.

I had occasion recently to visit the Great Plains area of the United States where the greatest drought in history has thrown an oppressive burden upon the people of those states. In planning for the better use of those millions of acres, power is a factor of vital importance—power to be used primarily for the conserving of the water supply—power, the application of which is essential not only to the cities, but to the farms and ranches of that whole area.

I speak of power in its many forms. It may be true, as I understand some of the authorities among you prophesy, that the world's oil reserves, because of their limited supply, some day may have to be apportioned to specific uses. It may be true that new applications of alcohol, processed from the products of the soil, may increase the usefulness of the internal combustion engine; but in any event it seems most probable that a greater use of electrical energy is absolutely essential in every sector, rural as well as urban, in the United States, and, indeed in the whole world.

Sound Policy Urged.

A sound and courageous public policy will lead toward its consummation.

One who considers the matter with forthright vision cannot convince himself that public policy for promotion of availability of electric energy can really harm the electric industry that exists today. It would give opportunity for that industry to add to achievements already great. The more integrated its sources of energy, the less it would require of excess capacity and the lower would be its costs. The broader the base of consumers of a product that is now classed as a necessity, the lower would be its costs and the greater its stability.

Years ago Steinmetz observed that electricity is expensive because it is not widely used, and it is not widely used because it is expensive. Notwithstanding reductions in rates and increase of consumption since his day—which, by the way, have demonstrated the truth of his words—that observation still holds true. There is a vicious circle which must be broken, and wise public policy will help to break it.

I still hold to the belief of two years ago, when I spoke as follows:

"We are going to see, I believe, with our own eyes electricity and power made so cheap that they will become a standard article of use, not only for agriculture and manufacturing, but also for every home within reach of an electric light line.

"The experience of those sections of the world that have cheap power proves very conclusively that the cheaper the power the more of it is used."

Several Reservoirs Built.

These words were spoken at Grand Coulee. The Government of the United States has promoted the construction of several great reservoirs, which you will inspect on your grand tour, primarily for navigation or reclamation, but with incidental values for flood control and the regulation of stream flow. Among other incidental values is the generation of electric power. This may prove to be the force that breaks the vicious circle to which I have referred. If these are not sufficient, the influence of additional meritorious projects awaiting development can be added.

Two great dams of the Tennessee Valley Authority have been completed and are making their contribution to the public weal. Grand Coulee is far enough along to enlist your interest, as also is Bonneville. At Boulder Dam on the mighty Colorado the gates were closed months ago; a great lake has come into being behind the dam; generating equipment has been installed in the power plant, and at this moment the powerful turbines are awaiting the relatively tiny impulse of electric current which will flow from the touch of my hand on the button which you see before me on the desk, to stir them to life and creative activity.

Boulder Dam, in the name of the people of the United States, to whom you are a symbol of greater things in the future; in the honored presence of guests from many nations; I call you to life!

Federal Judge Urges Hearing On Power Act

Stays Jurisdiction Ruling Until Constitutionality Is Determined.

By the Associated Press.

Cookeville, Tenn., Sept. 11.—Federal District Judge John J. Gore today called for a speedy hearing on the constitutionality of the Tennessee Valley Authority act before the question of jurisdiction is determined.

The judge made his unexpected statement to opposing counsel at the conclusion of a hearing on a motion by the Tennessee Valley Authority to dismiss a suit of 19 power companies challenging the constitutionality of the authority.

Judge Gore said he could not determine the question of jurisdiction, raised by the authority, until the question of whether the TVA act, which fixes jurisdiction, is constitutional, is decided.

"Curbstone opinion," Judge Gore said, "is that if the act is constitutional I am inclined to think that the forum designated in the act is the forum for the suit."

The act says the legal residence of the authority is in the northern district of Alabama.

Attorneys immediately bombarded the court with questions as to what the effect of his ruling would be. Newton D. Baker, chief of counsel for the power companies, asked "if the act is unconstitutional will there be jurisdiction in this court to protect the complainants?"

Judge Gore said that if the act is unconstitutional any court will have jurisdiction on questions raised in the suit.

"If the act is constitutional," he said, "even though the officers of the TVA had exceeded their authority, as is alleged in the bill of the complainants, I think jurisdiction would be in the northern district of Alabama."

The court asked that counsel for the power companies file briefs on the constitutionality question as early as possible next week.

'Valjeans' in U. S. Put at Thousands

Chicago, Sept. 11 (AP).—Existence of thousands of juvenile "Jean Valjeans" among the Nation's children was reported today by the Children's Bureau of the Federal Department of Labor.

They are boys and girls, guilty of some minor breach of the law, free after terms in schools of correction or reform.

They have no friends, no one wants to help them and the community suspects them and refuses them work, Miss Elsa Castendyck, director of the bureau's division of delinquency, told the thirty-third annual convention of the National Conference of Juvenile Agencies.

Her report assailed this public attitude, similar to that which caused Victor Hugo to rebuke the French penal system with his powerful story of Valjean, the bread and the bishop's candlesticks.

Col. D. W. Ryther Dies in Buffalo

Col. Dwight W. Ryther, United States Army, retired, died at Buffalo, N. Y., Tuesday, the War Department announced yesterday. He was 67.

Col. Ryther had no Washington service. He was a graduate of the School of the Line in 1920, and was on the General Staff Corps eligible list.

He was awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action against Spanish forces at Santiago, Cuba, and the Oak Leaf Cluster for gallantry in action in the Philippines.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Jean Troxel Ryther, of Lackawanna, N. Y.

Britain Again Seeks Portuguese Neutrality

London, Sept. 11 (AP).—British diplomats tonight called the Portuguese charge d'affaires, Francisco Calheiros Mehezes, to the foreign office in renewed efforts to bring his country into the neutrality body.

At the same time the British government made representations to Lisbon seeking the same end. The next committee session of the international neutrality group will discuss whether any loopholes exist in present agreements by which arms might be sent to Spain, it was said authoritatively.

Parole for Star Pitcher Worries Prison Mates

Carson City, Nev., Sept. 11 (AP).—The Rainbow, monthly publication edited by inmates of the Nevada State Penitentiary, expressed concern today because Thomas (Tommy) Russell—the prison baseball team's star pitcher—may soon get a parole. Russell, a convicted murderer, has been in the prison for about 15 years.

The magazine lists his baseball record as follows: Won 149 of 181 games in which he was the pitcher; struck out 2,330 batters out of 6,772; allowed 342 earned runs from 4,146 hits in 1,662 innings and bats better than .300.
